Hoover Unit Advocates More Power For Forrestal

Sixth Report Asks Reduced Status For Secretaries Of Three Services

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Hoover Commission yesterday proposed sweeping changes in the Nation's top military command structure to remedy what is called a serious lack of civilian control over the military.

Reporting to Congress, the 12-man group urged that the powers of the Secretary of Defense be vastly strengthened to assure such civil ascendancy and build better security forces. It was sharply critical of the present workings of the National Military Establishment.

Defense Secretary James Forrestal promptly replied. A member of the commission, he took no part in the consideration or preparation of the report—the sixth to be submitted by the group.

When asked for comment, Forrestal acknowledged much of what was said, declared that some of the recommendations already have been accomplished and noted that most of the others were proposed by him two months ago.

Major Recommendations

The commission's major recommendations:

1. All statutory authority in the service departments and agencies should be transferred to the Secretary of Defense—subject to the authority of the President.

2. The Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force should be demoted to the status of Undersecretaries of Defense, and deprived of their present right to appeal to the President over the head of the defense chief. They would administer their departments under the full direction and authority of the latter.

3. The Joint Chiefs of Staff should continue as now, with a chairman appointed by the Secretary of Defense with powers similar to those possessed by General Eisenhower.

4. An Undersecretary of Defense should be created, superior to the Army, Navy and Air Force Undersecretaries, as well as three Assistant Secretaries and other special assistants.

Can Make the Difference

The Hoover Commission based its warning of lack of civilian control over the military not so much on the traditional fear of "military cliques" as on other factors.

"Our success in achieving efficiency of military operations and planning, economy in execution and proper relationship of this new armed force to our political

GI Home Buyers To Get Refund of Million Dollars

Nearly 1700 GI home owners in the District, Maryland and Virginia stand to receive within 60 days more than a million dollars in refunds from builders because of faulty construction.

Joseph Bernard, compliance division, Office of the Housing Expediter, said the million dollars represents the total amount 53 builders have been ordered to refund home owners in the two-month period. Most builders have agreed to make the refunds voluntarily, he said, while the others may be required to do so by action of the United States Attorney.

Individual refunds range from $50 to $500, with the largest payment made by a single Washington builder amounting to $26,000. Veterans are notified by mail when their checks are available.

Hatfield's False Teeth Spit Back Rifle Bullet

Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, Feb. 28 (AP).—Police said George Hatfield put the barrel of a .22-caliber rifle in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

The bullet ran around the inside of his false teeth and came out his mouth.

Dr. J. E. Grimby treated Hatfield for a cut tongue. The teeth were wrecked.

Asks to See Bodies

CHARLES F. HOLOBER
. . . after waiving extradition . . . charged with murder

By Richard L. Lyons and Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporters

A 40-year-old District jewelry clerk calmly told Fairfax County police yesterday how he killed his wife and then buried his 8-month-old daughter alive with her in a shallow grave.

Police said they were astonished when Charles Francis Holober, after relating details of the crime in a confession, asked that he be allowed to see the bodies of his wife and child.

County officials refused to rule immediately on the request.

In a confession made first to Washington detectives and repeated later to Fairfax County police, Holober said he drove his wife, Frances, 37, and their infant daughter, June, to the grounds of the Green Forest nudist camp, about 4 miles southeast of Herndon, Va., last Thursday as part of a prepared murder plan.

According to the confession made to police, Holober, a member of the nudist camp, then shot his wife and when the pistol jammed as he tried to shoot the child, buried the dead mother and live child together in an 18-inch grave.

After his arrest in Washington early yesterday, Holober waived extradition and was returned to Fairfax County where he signed a confession and was charged with two counts of murder.

Yesterday afternoon, Holober was taken before Trial Justice Harry L. Garrico in Fairfax. He did not enter a plea. His bond was set at $50,000.

Holober agreed to talk to reporters after his return to Fairfax County but refused to discuss details of the crime. To them, he repeated his desire to see the bodies of his wife and child.

"I would give everything I own to undo it," he told reporters. He said also, "I realize I have done a terrible thing and will have to pay my debt to society."

However, when Holober first recounted his story to Washington detectives he was composed, they said, and showed no trace of emotion.

When he appeared yesterday morning in Municipal Court here for an extradition hearing he smiled and joked with detectives.

Holober, who has been living with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Holober, at 1216 Shepherd st. nw., said in his confession night it would be necessary to kill his wife.

He had married her at Rockville, Md., on December 22, 1947, he said, after she told him she was pregnant because of him. He said it was agreed that she would make no further demands on him and that they would live apart.

About three weeks ago, Holober said in his confession, his wife, again pregnant, threatened to move into the home of his family "bag and baggage," so he de-

Drive Started For Regional Va. Hospital

Nearby Areas Stress Need to Cope With Communicable Diseases

Lay and professional health workers from five nearby Virginia areas last night agreed to form local hospital commissions to work for a regional communicable disease and mental hospital.

Present at last night's meeting were representatives from Fairfax, Prince William, Loudoun and Arlington Counties, and the City of Falls Church. Not represented were Fauquier County and Alexandria.

Virginia State Senator Charles R. Fenwick, acting as chairman, said a State law provides that local hospital commissions have five members appointed by local governing bodies.

The delegates agreed that the commissions would stir up community interest in the need for a regional hospital among local medical groups.

Last night's group agreed to hold another meeting April 5 in the Falls Church city hall to discuss progress.

Mrs. Madge Longley, representing a Fairfax County lay organization, read a report to the group outlining existing problems which it said justified the demand for a regional hospital.

Alexandria, she said, reported a "pressing" need for hospital space for tuberculosis patients, with only two beds available on emergency basis for white patients.

Arlington Hospital has no communicable disease facilities and Fairfax County has had difficulty in securing such facilities.

Loudoun County, the report showed, is satisfied with its current setup, while Prince William and Fauquier Counties pointed out the problem of transportation which might arise in their participation in a regional hospital program.

Five Bulgar Pastors Make Guilty Pleas

Spying Confessions Entered at Rate Of 1 in 45 Minutes; Total Is Now 8

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 28 (AP). Proceedings speeded up in Bulgaria's spy trial today as five more Protestant churchmen pleaded guilty and asked for a chance to work for the Communist-controlled government.

Their confessions were entered at the rate of one every 45 minutes. So routine has the pattern of self-denunciation become that several spectators in the courtroom dozed during the session.

Eight defendants in all have entered pleas of guilty to charges of spying for the United States and Britain, treason and black market money dealings since the trial began Friday. Seven others still must plead.

Former U. S. Aide Named

Those who appeared on the stand today were: the Rev. Georgi Chernov, 46; the Rev. Lambri Mishkov, 41; the Rev. Georgi Vassev, 48; the Rev. Haralan Popov, 41, and the Rev. Ioncho Drianov, 41. Vassev is a Baptist and Mishkov a Congregationalist. The other three belong to the Pentecost Church.

Chernov testified he and other pastors had delivered information to America on Russian troop movements and on military and economic developments.

He said he had been ordered to collect espionage data by Cyril Black, former secretary in the United States political mission here. He claimed he had talked with Black during the period from November, 1944, to the middle of 1945.

American and British authorities in Sofia have rejected all charges made by the defendants in their court recitations. (Black, now a professor at Princeton University, has denied the accusations made against him, as have other Americans accused of complicity.)

Chernov said the Evangelical Church Council of Bulgaria gave orders through Protestant pastors to "praise everything American and slander all that is Russian." The council is an organization of Congregational, Methodist, Baptist and Pentecost churches in Bulgaria.

Accuses Americans

Vassev said he had been asked to collect information by two Americans whom he identified as Dr. William Coon, secretary general of the Baptist Mission in North America, and a man named Leuschner, called a Baptist youth leader. Money was sent from the United States to pay for such espionage, Vassev added.

All the defendants told the court that the secret security police who took their confessions in prison had displayed a "surprisingly noble attitude."

The remaining seven defendants are expected to enter pleas and make statements Tuesday.

In Chicago the North American Baptist headquarters issued a statement denying the church had had any connection with the United States intelligence services.

Administration Leaders Start All-Out Battle on Filibusters; Truman's Program at Stake

Drive to Curb Debate in Senate Runs Head-On Into Southern Opposition

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

With the full backing of the President, Senate Administration leaders yesterday launched a drive to break the back of future filibusters, even at the risk of a complete legislative stalemate.

The move ran head-on into a Southern filibuster aimed directly at the President's civil rights program, but imperiling every major bill on the Administration's agenda.

With Mr. Truman's blessing, Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), moved for Senate consideration of a resolution empowering two-thirds of the Senate to shut off debate on any matter whatever at any time.

Barkley to Enforce Rules

Before the debate even got going, Vice President Alben W. Barkley (Ky.) served notice that he will enforce the letter of the Senate rules so strictly that the slightest non-compliance will take a Senator off his feet.

Later Lucas told newsmen he personally will file a cloture petition on Thursday, testing the present ineffectual cloture rule by putting a history-making decision up to Barkley.

Previous Senate presiding officers have ruled cloture does not apply to a motion to call up a bill, such as the motion now pending.

If Barkley reverses that ruling and the Senate sustains him, the current filibuster can be easily cracked and the rules change adopted.

Lucas to Go Limit

But if Barkley rules otherwise, or if the Senate overrides and tosses out the cloture petition, Southern Democrats, some 21 strong, may be in a position to talk on indefinitely.

In either event, Lucas told reporters he will press the rules change fight to a no-time-limit finish, even if rent control, ECA and reciprocal trade extensions, housing and other key Truman bills get snarled up behind the filibuster.

The Illinois Democrat disclosed presidential acceptance of the "showdown" strategy following a leadership conference at the White House.

Said Lucas: "This issue has to be met sooner or later and we might as well meet it now."

At 12:33 p. m. in the Senate he called up the resolution that touched off the fight.

"We must grapple with this problem firmly, and reach a definite decision this session," he said.

Actually, the filibuster was not formally launched until four hours later. Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) led off for the Southerners at 4:30 p. m.

George called it a "memorable debate" raising issues that are "bound to have repercussions hereafter." He said the rules

Ban on Odd-Hour Meetings For Wage Pressure Upheld

Hirshberg Conviction By Court-Martial of Navy Is Thrown Out

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday threw out a Navy court-martial conviction of Harold E. Hirshberg on a charge of striking two fellow prisoners in Japanese prison camps.

Hirshberg was sentenced to 10 months' confinement, to reduction from chief signalman to the rating of apprentice seaman, and to dishonorable discharge.

Justice Black delivered the unanimous decision.

Hirshberg's appeal to the Supreme Court questioned the authority of the Navy court to try him. He was honorably discharged after his return from the Orient to New York City. He reenlisted the next day. Eleven months later he was served with the charges on which he was tried by court-martial.

His appeal was from a decision by the United States Circuit Court in New York City which upheld the conviction.

Hirshberg became a prisoner of war when the United States forces on Corregidor surrendered to the Japanese in May, 1942. He remained a prisoner for three years. He was accused of striking George N. Gaboury of Webster, Mass., and Robert H. Welch of Tulsa, Okla., naval enlisted men who were members of a work section under Hirshberg's command.

The Supreme Court ruled that Hirshberg obviously could not

Justice Jackson Delivers 5-4 Ruling In Wisconsin Case

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld a State ban against union members leaving work at irregular times as a means of pressing wage demands.

The ban was issued by the Wisconsin Employment Relations Board against an AFL union whose members are employed in two Milwaukee plants of the Briggs Stratton Corp.

Justice Jackson delivered the 5-4 decision. Justice Douglas wrote a dissent in which Justices Black and Rutledge concurred. Justice Murphy also wrote a dissent. Rutledge concurred in Murphy's dissent, too.

The union, Local 232 of the United Automobile Workers of America, said its members authorized special union meetings to be called at any time during working hours at the two plants. The local appealed to the high tribunal court from a decision by the Wisconsin Supreme Court which upheld the Labor Board's action.

Asked to Stop Practice

The board's order called on the union to quit engaging "in concerted efforts to interfere with production by arbitrarily calling union meetings and inducing work stoppages during regularly scheduled working hours or engaging in any other concerted effort to interfere with production of the corporation, except by leaving the premises in an orderly manner for the purpose of going on strike."

Jackson said the court majority thought this type of work stoppage "to win unstated ends was neither forbidden by Federal statute nor was it legalized and approved thereby."

Hence, Jackson wrote, the majority found "no basis for denying to Wisconsin the power in governing her internal affairs to regulate a course of conduct neither made a right under Federal law nor a violation of it and which has the coercive effect obvious in this device."

Douglas, in dissenting, called the work stoppages a strike. He added:

"If the States can outlaw this strike I see no reason why they cannot adopt regulations which determine the manner in which strikes may be called in these interstate industries. Can they in practical effect outlaw strikes by requiring a unanimous vote of the workers in order to call one? . . . The right to strike, which Congress

Senate Unit Unlikely to Cut British Aid

$940,000,000 Figure Sounds About Right, Connally Declares

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

British aid funds under the Marshall Plan will be approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee without significant change, it was indicated yesterday.

To cut the proposed 940-million-dollar aid to Britain for the next fiscal year would undercut the recovery of Europe, the committee was told in two hours of testimony by Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman and Thomas K. Finletter, chief of the ECA mission to London.

The hearing was called to re-examine Britain's financial position following a statement to a United Nations meeting last week by a British official that Britain's recovery is now virtually complete.

Connally "Satisfied"

After the hearing, Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), told reporters:

"I think the testimony of Hoffman and Finletter was, in the main, very satisfactory, and I doubt that the original figure (940 million dollars) will be materially charged. . . .

"So far as I am concerned, the figure that they submitted before is satisfactory to me."

Finletter described the aid which Britain seeks as being less than what he would have proposed to meet her financial needs.

"In my opinion," he said, "she will need more than she is asking . . . I have grave doubts as to whether she can make it (continue her recovery with that amount) . . . . but she is determined to try it."

Executive Session Today

Committee hearings on the request of $5,580,000,000 to carry the ECA program through the next 15 months had originally ended February 17, but were reopened yesterday.

Senator Connally announced that the committee will meet in executive session at 10:30 today on the ECA extension bill.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), ranking Republican member of the committee who had made the motion to reopen the hearings, made no comment afterward.

During the hearing, he commended the "willingness of Britons to submit themselves to their amazing program of austerity," in attempting to achieve national recovery. He noted, however, that for the first 12-month authorization

Area Orchardists to Check On Damage From Sudden Cold

Washington Snow Blanket Virtually Gone From Streets

Temperatures dropped below the freezing point in Washington last night as the Weather Bureau forecast 22-degree temperatures for early today.

The snow blanket was practically gone from traveled area streets by 6 p. m. when the mercury hit 32 degrees. The snow which fell Sunday night was considerably deeper in some suburban areas than the official 1.8 inches.

A dry northwest wind was bringing the colder temperatures to the Washington area. Because of the wind, the bureau said temperatures in the city and suburbs would be about the same. Usually, it is colder in the suburbs with falling mercury.

Nine Department of Sanitation sand trucks, a few Capital Transit sanders and sweepers, but mostly sunny, 35-degree weather and lusty winds reaching up to 44 miles per hour licked the snowfall by midday.

Police reported no unusual traffic mishaps, but a few Capital Transit vehicles found the going from 5 to 15 minutes slower than usual through the early morning rush.

Planes bound for National Airport were slowed up in landing by the poor visibility.

Peach Growers Fear Serious Loss; Apple Men More Hopeful

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Maryland and Virginia fruit growers will study their orchards carefully today to determine how much damage the present cold wave has done.

Peaches particularly are in danger, orchardists agree. But apple growers are hopeful that their buds are not nearly enough open yet to suffer great loss unless the cold snap is prolonged.

Carroll R. Miller of Martinsburg, W. Va., manager of the Appalachian Apple Service, predicted that while some damage would be done to apples and cherries, most of the trees will be "all right."

"The buds on most of the trees around here are still pretty tight," Miller said.

Peaches are a different story. Miller joined with other experts in fearing that what promised to be a bumper peach crop may be seriously damaged.

Richard E. Byrd of the widespread orchards of Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) near Berryville, Va., made virtually the same report. "We are more fearful for apples of a cold snap later on," he said, "after the buds are a little farther along. It will be a miracle if we can escape it."

Byrd predicted a bumper crop of apples if the feared spring cold doesn't nip them. The Byrds have disposed of their peach orchards. Byrd reported that peaches are in serious danger in his area.

Truman Nold of the National Apple Institute said it would be a day or so before any damage from the present cold snap can be appraised.

"I'm scared silly about the situation," he said.

Idaho Solon's Proposal

Blushing Legislator Says Yes To Question on House Floor

Boise, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—One member of the Idaho Legislature proposed marriage to a colleague today on the floor of the House—and was accepted.

The proposal came from Representative Edwin Snow of Adams. His bride-to-be is pretty, red-haired Representative Edith Miller of Ada.

Miss Miller, a lawyer, is Boise's first woman city judge—a position she still fills when not busy at the Legislature. She, like Snow, is in her early 30's.

The proposal was made on the floor of the House after Representative Walter Averill of Cassia, announced to his colleagues that he had been married during the weekend.

Then Snow rose slowly to his feet and said:

"In view of the announcement made by Mr. Averill, I wonder if the lady from Ada would yield to a question?"

Miss Miller replied:

"I'll yield, but only to the question, and I won't guarantee an answer."

Snow queried:

"Since Mr. Averill has accepted the bonds of happy matrimony, I was wondering if the lady from Ada would consent to marry me?"

The "Lady from Ada" blushed prettily. Amid the roars of laughter, Representative Larry Mills hammered for order, and ruled Snow's question did not need an answer.

Miss Miller disappeared, still blushing furiously. She returned a few minutes later and announced, "on a point of personal privilege," that "I accept Mr. Snow's proposal."

No date was set for the wedding.

Red Cross Job Is Nation's, Truman Says in Broadcast

President Truman last night told the Nation in a broadcast that keeping the Red Cross strong "is a part of our over-all job."

The Chief Executive's appeal touched off the national drive of the Red Cross to raise 60 million dollars. The 1949 quota for the District is $924,000.

The text of Mr. Truman's address follows:

My Fellow Americans:

On the eve of the 1949 fund campaign of the American Red Cross, I consider it not only a duty, but a genuine privilege, to call upon all men and women of good will to support this humanitarian cause.

Earlier tonight, millions of you heard stirring Red Cross messages dramatized by some of America's finest talent. During the month of March, citizens throughout the United States and Canada will hear and see other programs dedicated to this annual campaign. Keeping the Red Cross strong is a part of our over-all job.

This afternoon I renewed my annual membership in the Red Cross just as I have done for many years. As evidence of enrollment I was given a small button for my lapel—a Red Cross emblem on a field of white. Here is a symbol we can all wear proudly, with full confidence that it stands for a movement which works for all the people all the time. Wherever there is trouble, there too is the Red Cross—a partnership of the people—translating our dollars into good deeds.

The Red Cross commands the respect and gratitude of all of us. And small wonder that it does when we review its record of performance.

The past fiscal year proved to

Fourth Substitute For Salt Declared To Be Poisonous

The Food and Drug Administration yesterday warned doctors and consumers against a fourth "dangerous and poisonous" salt substitute now on the market.

Other substitutes branded dangerous and poisonous by the FDA are Wes-Sal, Foodsal, and Salti-Salt.

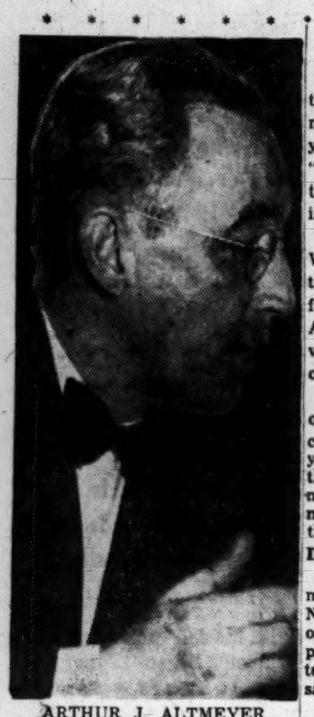
200 Millions Asked To Bar Destitution



ARTHUR J. ALTMEYER

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Truman Administration yesterday asked Congress for 200 million to 250 million dollars a year for a long-range program of "preventing destitution" by a system of home relief for all needy—including the cost of medical care.

Testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, Arthur J. Altmeyer, Commissioner for Social Security, outlined the Administration's arguments for a vast expansion of the present Social Security system.

If the new law goes into effect on July 1, 1949, Altmeyer told the committee, the cost for the fiscal year 1950 would not exceed one-third to one half the total estimated above because of the slowness of administrative changes in the States.

Declines to Comment

After the formal hearing, Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) declined to express an opinion on the Administration proposals. The committee will have to give them further study, he said.

Altmeyer dealt first with relief for the poor. The Social Security system, he told the committee, has been successful "in accomplishing its primary, immediate objective—the abolition of the old-fashioned poor house." He said that today needy persons receive cash assistance which enables them to live in their own homes but the objective of preventing destitution is "not being met."

President Truman, he declared, is proposing that Federal financial aid be extended to all needy people, in a Federal-State money-matching system.

Up to $100 for Couple

The aid would range up to $100 a month for a needy couple plus $20 for each additional person in a needy home.

"To enable States to make medical care available to needy persons," Altmeyer said, "we believe that Federal participation should be extended to payments made directly to individuals and agencies furnishing medical services and supplies to public assistance recipients."

The Social Security Commissioner said the present maximums of $27 for one dependent child and $18 for each additional child are particularly inadequate and should be raised.

President Truman also has urged that 20,000,000 more persons—doctors, lawyers, farmers, businessmen, household servants and others be covered under old age insurance; that greatly increased benefits be given, and social security taxes on pay and payrolls be increased.

Dewey Called 'Tax Spender' In GOP Fight

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was classed with President Truman as a "high tax spender" today as Republican rebels in the Legislature stepped up their fight against the Administration's tax program.

A bitter attack on Dewey's record $936,200,000 budget, and proposed $168,200,000 tax boost, came from Pliny Williamson, veteran Republican Senator, and a prime mover in the GOP "tax revolt."

Williamson, who represents wealthy Westchester County, said that both Mr. Truman and Dewey are "for a constantly increasing cost of government."

"It is time that we told the high tax spenders that we have had enough," he said.

Opposition to Dewey's tax program has come chiefly from Westchester and Erie County GOP delegates. The Governor took to the air last night to explain his position in a State-wide broadcast from the executive mansion.

Dewey told the people that any budget could be cut, but only at the expense of essential State services.

The so-called tax revolt is the most serious threat to Dewey's leadership since he took office six years ago. Dissenting Republicans, with Democratic support, are strong enough to block passage of the Governor's budget in the Senate.

Williamson's statement was the strongest to emanate yet from Republican opponents of the Governor's spending and tax program. It apparently signalled an irrevocable breach between Dewey and a powerful segment of the State GOP.

'S.O.B.' Talk Not Offensive To Sorority

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—Those men who blushed at President Truman's salty initial-calling last week may be interested to learn that at least one group of women doesn't feel its sensibilities were offended.

Muriel Davis, president of Sigma Alpha Sigma, white-collar girls' sorority with some 500 Midwestern members, said 77 per cent of the group's membership indicated in a survey they don't think Mr. Truman's cussing was "anything to get excited about."

High executives, the ladies said, are forced "to pretend they are nobler than they are."

"We'd rather have the man in authority scorch the ceiling with sulphurous language than express his displeasure in hidden little mean ways," one member wrote.

"No modern woman should take such an expression literally," another stated.

Farm Prices Decrease 4 Pct. as Needs Drop 1 Pct.

Farm prices dropped 4 per cent between January 15 and February 15 while the cost of things farmers have to buy dropped 1 per cent, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday.

Farm prices on February 15 were at the lowest level since September, 1946, BAE said, while prices of things the farmer buys are about the same as the average for all of 1948.

The parity ratio of farm prices to prices of other commodities stands at 105, the lowest since 1942.

FCC Refuses To Cancel Radio Hearing

By The Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday refused to cancel a public hearing set for March 16 at Los Angeles on the handling of news broadcasts by three radio stations.

G. A. Richards of Los Angeles, controlling stockholder in the three stations—KMPC, Los Angeles; WJR, Detroit, and WGAR, Cleveland—had asked that the West Coast sessions be set aside. In their place, he asked an opportunity to appear before the full commission in Washington to explain operations and answer questions.

The case grew out of complaints by the Radio News Club of Hollywood and the American Jewish Congress last year that news over KMPC had been "slanted" to reflect Richards' personal views. Because of Richards' interest in the Detroit and Cleveland stations, the FCC ordered its investigation to include those outlets also.

Richards said in a petition filed last week that he has been ill and "admits that he has in the past issued instructions to various employes of the stations which could have resulted in slanting of the news, but so far as petitioner knows never did so."

The Commission said yesterday that Richards could ask for hearings here later, but that the Los Angeles session will be held as announced. Commissioner E. M. Webster was designated to conduct the West Coast proceeding.

One member of the Commission, Rosel H. Hyde, voted for a preliminary personal hearing for Richards here prior to the Los Angeles hearing.

Uniform Rules Urged for All Air Carriers

By The Associated Press

The Air Transport Association yesterday called for uniform Federal regulation of safety standards and operational procedures for both scheduled airlines and non-scheduled air carriers.

Emory S. Land, president of the organization composed of the scheduled airlines, made the request in a news conference at which he outlined his views on what he called the "two standards of operation" now employed.

Land told reporters a wide difference exists in the scope of Federal regulations imposed on scheduled airlines and those for the non-scheduled operators. He listed these as matters of "legal conformity, maintenance and inspection (of aircraft), safety standards, pilot experience requirements, insurance and safety records."

The airlines spokesman asserted that the scheduled airlines must operate under regulations "vastly stringent and costly" than those covering the irregular carriers.

He did not say whether his organization advocates relaxation or tightening the regulations but said that both types of operations should be governed by "the same set of rules."

Countess Fails To Collect From Frank Jay Gould

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe today dismissed a suit brought by a French countess to compel Frank Jay Gould, heir to a railroad fortune, to make good on a $400,000 check.

She alleged he gave her the check in her chateau in 1944 for what she said were her efforts in keeping him out of Nazi hands.

Countess Anne Vilbert de Sairigne, now a New York City resident, said she presented the check to the United States Trust Co. for payment in February, 1947, but was unable to collect.

Coxe dismissed the case on a plea by Gould's lawyers that he now is living in France under the care of doctors, and that it is impossible for him to travel.

In effect, Coxe ruled that the countess had brought the suit in the wrong court.

'Living Buddha' Arrives Here For Teaching Job in Baltimore

By The Associated Press

The Dilowa of Hutukhtu, the only "Living Buddha" outside Asia, arrived yesterday by plane en route to Johns Hopkins University where he will help teach the Mongolian language and history.

The 66-year-old Lama claims to be the nineteenth reincarnation of Dilowa, a saint in the Buddha religion who lived in northern India about 1200 years ago.

The Dilowa, dressed in his brown silk robe, was greeted at the airport by a State Department official and later by Owen Lattimore, director of the Johns Hopkins Page School of International Relations in Baltimore.

Speaking in Mongolian, with Lattimore acting as interpreter, he told reporters Buddhism "certainly will be in for a bad time" in the areas of China occupied by the Communists.

"In Outer Mongolia, where I come from, I understand most of the temples and monasteries are operating in the capital city.

He said he had not heard from the monastery he headed in 1931 and presumes it is among those shut down.

The Dilowa has spent most of his recent years in territory controlled by the Chinese Nationalist government but was thinking of returning to Communist-held Mongolia at the time Johns Hopkins offered him the position.

"I do not belong to the new times in Outer Mongolia and doubt if they would let me in," he said. He added: "In any event I doubt if I could do anything there."

The Dilowa is expected to be able to teach with the aid of a smattering of English he knows and through the use of an interpreter.

District's Red Tape Really Binds, Says Brig. Gen. Young

If you think Army red tape hamstrings top officials, you should try serving in the District government, Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young yesterday told a group of military engineers.

"The complex, outworn system of checks on the District Commissioners that can't be outlawed by executive order is astonishing," said Brig. Gen. Young, who is just rounding out a three-year tour of duty at the District Building.

Speaking to the Washington post, Society of American Military Engineers, at the Burlington Hotel, Young emphasized that the city's cumbersome adminstrative setup is not the Commissioners' nor Congress' fault, but the District's basic law.

"In the Army Engineers, commanding officers generally have broad discretion in doling out their funds, once appropriated by Congress." Not so in the District, said Young, where "specific authorization for specific construction jobs is set forth in the most meticulous detail."

Rep. Heller Takes Oath To Fill House List

The House had a full membership of 435 yesterday for the first time this year as Louis B. Heller of New York was sworn in.

Heller, a Democrat, succeeds the late John J. Delaney (D., N. Y.), who died before being sworn in as a member of the Eighty-first Congress.

Naval Force To Rehearse Landing Today

By James J. Strebig

With the Atlantic Fleet on Caribean Maneuvers, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Navy will stage Tuesday a noisy dress rehearsal of its big mock amphibious landing on Vieques Island.

A score of Senators and Congressmen observing the Navy's current maneuvers will watch the rehearsal from shipboard.

Live ammunition will be used during the rehearsal, but not in the actual landing planned for Wednesday. Defending forces on Vieques Island will use mock ammunition and mines when sailors and Marines go ashore.

A top expert on the atomic bomb said, meanwhile, that it will cost one A-bomb per ship in attacks on a properly deployed fleet at sea.

Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, who directed the Bikini "Operation Crossroads" in 1946, discussed strategy with newsmen following yesterday's simulated A-bomb attack on the fleet taking part in maneuvers in the Caribbean.

An imitation bomb dropped yesterday was ruled by war games referees to have put the carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt out of commission at least temporarily.

"No one bomb of any type I know about would have hurt more than one carrier," Blandy told a news conference.

At the time of the mock attack, the carriers Franklin D. Roosevelt, Kearsarge and Leyte were about two miles apart on the corners of a triangle. That separation is more than double the normal World War II practice.

Blandy said it represents the distance needed for protection against atomic bombs, on the basis of present knowledge.

He said little damage need be expected beyond a one-mile range from an A-bomb blast. The mock bomb—a parachate flare—struck about three-fourths of a mile from the Roosevelt.

Blandy recalled that the battleship Nevada was much closer to the real bomb exploded at Bikini and suffered relatively little damage.

New 14-Week Army Training Starts Mar. 7

Fort Monroe, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—A revised 14-week program of basic military training for Army enlisted men will be put into effect about March 7, Gen. Jacob L. Devers, chief of Army Field Forces, announced today.

The new program, which will replace the present eight-week training period, will continue to emphasize the Army's philosophy that the soldier is an individual, General Devers said.

General Devers, who is responsible for preparation, standardization and supervision of basic training of all Army personnel, and for advanced and specialized training of individuals and units of the combat arms, explained that the eight-week basic course was being increased because regular Army units in the United States have been brought up to authorized strength.

Four Plead Guilty In Hungarian Trial

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 28 (AP).—Two Catholic priests, a lay brother of the Jesuit order, and a civilian pleaded guilty today to charges of black market dealings in foreign currency.

Among them were Josef Cardinal Mindszenty's former treasurer, Msgr. Imre Boka, and Duke Paul Esterhazy's former secretary, Dr. Gabor Horvath.

Father Josef Zid, treasurer of the Jesuit order in Hungary, and Brother Janos Zaradi, a Jesuit priest, also pleaded guilty at start of their trial today.

They are among 14 defendants accused by Hungary's Communist-led government of "political conspiracy" with Cardinal Mindszenty and the duke.

Boka declared he delivered dollars and other money to various bankers and brokers for sale on the black market. He did so, he said, on instructions from the cardinal and his secretary. He added that the profits were used for charity.

Horvath admitted it was he who proposed that Esterhazy—once one of Europe's wealthiest men—purchase dollars in the black market because he feared his employer's wealth might melt away as a result of nationalization measures in Hungary. Horvath said he knew the dollars purchased came from the cardinal's residence.

Zid testified that as treasurer of the Jesuit order he accepted funds from the cardinal's court and sold them in the black market.

His object, he said, was to strengthen his treasury lest state funds for the church be cut off as a result of strained relations with the government authorities. He said he also needed money for monks who crossed Hungary in secrecy—a remark which was not amplified.

Zid said he did not profit personally from the transactions, and was not aware at the time that they were illegal.

Zaradi testified that a Father Ryle, head of the Jesuits in Hungary, was involved with him in black market operations. The monk said Ryle, who is believed to be an American, announced before leaving for the United States that he would collect dollars for the Jesuits. Zaradi testified he did not then know it was unlawful to handle foreign currency in that manner, and that he never benefitted personally from such dealings.

Trial of the 14 opened 20 days after a people's court sentenced Cardinal Mindszenty to life imprisonment on charges of treason, spying and black market money dealings.

Reds Shower Leaflets on Future Queen

London, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Communists showered Red propaganda leaflets on Princess Elizabeth, the future Queen of England, and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, at a preview of the "ideal home" exhibition here today.

The leaflets were hurled from the gallery a few hours after it was disclosed that Harry Pollitt, general secretary of the British Communists would side with Russia in any third world war.

Police said they "interviewed" the two men who threw the leaflets and released them. One had shouted, "Homes for the workers, not for the rich!"

The royal couple ignored the leaflets and the scuffling in the gallery. They said they were especially interested in the exhibits because they are now furnishing their new London home, Clarence House.

They left for Edinburgh tonight.

Pollitt's statements, following similar ones by Communist leaders in France and Italy, were quoted by the London Daily Worker. He reportedly told the executive that British Communists would implement their pro-Soviet stand with "strikes and councils of action" in case of war.

These declarations were labeled here as a Soviet "cold war" move designed to picture western Europe as a bad risk for American money.

British Socialist sources said the "chain reaction" statements indicate that the Communist Information Bureau (Cominform) has ordered the disruption of western European economic recovery.

German Red Predicts Support for Russia

Berlin, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Otto Grotewohl, cochairman of the Soviet zone Communist Party, declared today that Germans would support Russia if war broke out between Russia and the Western powers.

In a speech reported by the Soviet-licensed news agency ADN, Grotewohl told a Soviet sector audience that the "imperialist warmongers want war (but) I do not believe it will come." He charged that after almost four years of occupation the Western powers were exploiting and oppressing Germans and refusing them a just peace and a central government.

Japanese Red Hedges On 'Invaders' Issue

Tokyo (Tuesday) March 1 (NYHT).—Tiuicho Tokuda, secretary-general of the Japanese Communist Party, bowed to anti-Russian sentiment in this country yesterday sufficiently to take issue with the idea of welcoming an invading Red Army.

"The situation in Japan is very different from Europe," Tokuda said. "The Japanese Communist Party holds that it is its greatest duty to fight for the restoration and maintenance of the country's complete independence. Therefore Japanese Communists would fight whatever foreign nation invaded the country. It is very clear, however, that Soviet Russia has no intention of invading Japan."

Acheson Confers With Senators

By the United Press

Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson met privately with three leading members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee late yesterday to report on negotiations for a North Atlantic Security Pact.

Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) told reporters after the half-hour meeting at the Capitol that "a great number of matters" were discussed, "including the progress on the Atlantic Pact."

He said committee members and Acheson remained "in accord" on the pact.

Acheson had told reporters as he left the unannounced meeting that it was not primarily concerned with the pact.

"It's something else," he said cryptically.

In addition to Connally, Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Walter F. George (D., Ga.) were present at the meeting.

Finland Weighs New Regime for Russian Parleys

Helsinki, Finland, Feb. 28 (AP).—Sources close to the government said today talks are expected next week on forming a coalition government, including Communists, to meet possible Russian demands on Finland.

Non-Communist parties think Russia may invoke last year's friendship pact to get new bases on Finnish territory. They fear such a Soviet move as a possible offset to the fact that Norway and Denmark are leaning toward the proposed North Atlantic Alliance.

"We may not be the best government to negotiate with Russia in case developments take this turn," a spokesman for the governing Socialist Party said.

Premier Karl August Fagerholm's cabinet barely scraped through Parliament on a vote of confidence last week, 97 to 95.

Stalin Orders Price Slashes On Many Food, Clothes Items

Moscow, Feb. 28 (AP).—Prime Minister Stalin tonight proclaimed price cuts in 45 classifications of food, clothing and other consumers' goods, effective Tuesday.

The decree said the changes will raise the ruble's purchasing power and strengthen Soviet money in relation to foreign currencies.

Stalin knocked 10 per cent off the price of bread, fish, butter and canned goods; 20 per cent off the price of cheese, and 12 to 20 per cent off many clothing items. Vodka will be reduced 28 per cent.

Restaurants, tea houses and other catering establishments were ordered to make corresponding reductions in their prices in this, a new step toward reattaining the prewar standard of living. The announcement said:

"The new reduction . . . will bring about a new additional cheapening of consumer goods by at least 48 billion rubles over a period of one year.

"This loss to the state budget, which at the same time constitutes a pure gain for the population, must be recovered and undoubtedly will be covered by the government by means of a number of economic measures."

Muscovites rejoiced at the news. Small, excited groups gathered in the snowy streets to discuss it, and housewives prepared to invade the stores Tuesday.

Wonder Drug Saves Twins Stricken With Pneumonia . . .

The Washington Post

HOME AGAIN—Susan and Louise, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Tourkin, 530 10th st. sw., are home and well today, thanks to the new drug, aureomycin. The two infants recovered from near-fatal cases of bronchial pneumonia at Children's Hospital

Two Priests Sentenced to Death by Slavs

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 28 (AP).—Two priests and two laymen were reported sentenced to death today, convicted of wartime aid to German and Italian forces in Yugoslavia.

The newspaper Borba, official Communist party newspaper, announced the verdicts. It identified the clergymen as Alfons Jarc, a monk, and Viljen Saveli, chaplain at Stari Trg in western Yugoslavia, where there was bitter partisan fighting during the war. Borba said both had confessed.

The priests' religion was not mentioned, but it was assumed here they are Roman Catholics, the faith of most Slovenes.

Two laymen, described by the paper as "cutthroats," were sentenced to hard labor in prison for terms of five to 20 years, Borba said.

Borba charged the two priests headed a group collaborating with the Axis in 1942. It accused them of treason, spying, listing persons to be sent to concentration camps and persuading Germans to kill nine partisans. The priests also were accused of "anti-people's activities" after the war.

Slav Demands Are Rejected

London, Feb. 28 (NYHT).—Austria rejected today Yugoslav "compromise" demands in connection with the Austrian treaty of independence.

Dr. Karl Gruber, Austrian Foreign Minister, appeared before the foreign ministers' deputies of the United States, Great Britain, France and Russia and turned down the four proposals which Yugoslavia submitted last week as a basis for settling Austro-Yugoslav differences.

Yugoslavia had demanded creation of an autonomous state for most of the Slovene minority in Austria, special protection for Croats and Slovenes outside that area, certain limited frontier rectifications and "substantial" reparations.

On the proposal for an autonomous Slovene state, Dr. Gruber denounced the idea as threatening to be a "constitutional monster." In addition, Dr. Gruber disputed the Yugoslav implication that the Slovens in the Carinthian province are longing to be freed from Austrian rule.

He also rejected the demand for special protection for Slovenes and Croats in Austria on the grounds that the Austrian constitution "foresees sufficient guaranties for the minorities."

Dr. Gruber offered to consider inserting into the proposed treaty the relevant provisions of the Austrian constitution concerning minorities. But he refused to consider new proposals.

He was just as emphatic in his rejection of the vague territorial and reparations claims against Austria.

New Drug, Breathing Aids Combined to Save Baby Twins

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A new drug and an old method of breath-conditioning were credited yesterday with saving infant twin daughters from near-fatal cases of bronchial pneumonia.

The 8-week-old girls, Susan and Louise, were returned home from Children's Hospital yesterday noon to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Tourkin of 530 10th st. sw.

Squirming and gurgling, they showed no ill effects from the attacks that kept both in a "touch and go" status for days. It was during these spells, the mother said, that nurses and doctors worked valiantly to maintain just the right mixtures of humidity and oxygen to keep them breathing while aureomycin fought infections.

Nearly 3 Times Normal

The infants' dual fight for their lives began at the hospital's level at 1:30 a. m. on February 14 when Louise was taken to Children's Hospital. Her struggles for breath were recorded at 88 respirations a minute, nearly three times the normal rate of 30.

Ten hours later, Susan, similarly afflicted, was entered in the same private room, each in a separate incubator. The mother, a registered nurse, took over one of the eight-hour daily nursing shifts to tend her babies.

For a week, the mother said yesterday, the nurses and doctors carefully guided administrations of oxygen and steam into the incubators. Lids of the incubators were raised sufficiently to add the steam in carefully observed amounts through a flexible metal tubing.

"The hospital doesn't have one of those new machines which do the mixing scientifically," said Mrs. Tourkin.

Drug Fought Infections

Aureomycin, the "golden drug," meanwhile, fought the respiratory infections. One of the newest antibiotics, it only recently has been proved effective against virtually all forms of pneumonia as well as rickettsial fevers such as Rocky Mountain spotted fever. A large-scale program on the clinical uses of aureomycin is under way at Children's Hospital, under grant of the National Institute of Health.

Doctors who worked on the twin cases included the family physician, Dr Theresa T. Woo; the hospital resident in charge, Dr. Bjorn Gudbrandsson, and the hospital consultant, Dr. John Washington.

The machine referred to by Mrs. Tourkin, hospital physicians said, has not long been available, and is costly. It was developed particularly, they said, to save the lives of new-born infants suffering atelectasis, a condition in which the lungs do not normally expand at birth.

The twins' father is executive secretary of the Brandeis Chapter, Zionist Organization of America, at 1529 16th st. nw.

Marine Insurance For Aid Shipments Approved by ECA

By The Associated Press

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday anounced a policy change in connection with marine insurance on Marshall Plan shipments.

An official statement said that since last September 13, the recovery agency's policy has been not to pay marine insurance premiums. The policy change, which becomes effective today, provides that henceforth ECA will pay such costs but only on application of the nation receiving the aid shipment.

The new policy leaves to the foreign government the decision on whether to insure a specific cargo and from whom the protection will be purchased.

West European Nations Vote Open Door to Red Satellites

Brussels, Feb. 28 (NYHT).—The European Movement, an organization of government, parliamentary and political leaders from 23 countries and western Germany, unanimously adopted today Winston Churchill's doctrine that the Soviet satellites must rejoin the free community of continental countries.

This refusal to accept the "iron curtain" as a permanent barrier between eastern and western European states also made clear that Spain eventually must prepare herself for a democratic regime. The movement's political program says: "Our aim is the union in freedom of all the peoples of Europe."

"In a world dominated by political and economic units of continental dimensions, the European nations cannot hope to survive on a basis of political and economic independence," the 140 members of the movement's council agreed.

Left unsaid in the movement's political program was the way in which the democratic states of Europe should achieve "the deliverance" of the non-democratic countries. This was a phrase used by Churchill, in opening the council's meeting here Friday. He said freeing the non-democratic states was "the ultimate purpose" of European unity. Churchill, former British Prime Minister, is honorary president of the council.

It was evident that the European Movement considers it has more to fear from the Soviet Union than the Soviet Union has to fear from political and economic union in the West. Speakers frequently referred to Russia as the "menace" making European unity imperative.

Command Change Seen in Germany

Berlin, Feb. 28 (AP).—Gen Lucius D. Clay said tonight he has asked informally to be retired from his duties as United States military governor of Germany.

It appears likely there may be a complete change in American administration here by early summer. Clay's retirement would certainly be followed by wholesale resignations among the top advisers in the military government.

Three generals have been named as possible successors. They are: Gen. Mark Clark, former military governor of Austria; Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, who has asked to be relieved of his post as Ambassador to Moscow, and Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer.

Clay told an informal news conference in Frankfurt that he had no information about who might succeed him. He pointed out that Washington had not acted on his retirement request, submitted several months ago. The general asked to be freed from his duties here "at the earliest moment the Government felt it could release me."

The Chicago Tribune said last night it had learned authoritatively that Clay would retire by June and possibly within the next 60 days.

In Washington Secretary of the Army Royall said today no decision has been made either on Clay's retirement or on the appointment of a successor.

Clay originally applied for retirement a year ago. He has become a symbol of resistance to Soviet pressure in Germany. This has been one of the chief factors in the general's staying here.

Even now the Russians would propagandize Clay's retirement as a victory for them. However, the airlift to blockaded Berlin symbolizes American policy at present, and Clay's retirement would not have the adverse effect on German morale now it would have had last year.

The Soviet-licensed German news agency ADN said tonight:

"The United States Government has to solve big problems in Berlin and western Germany at present. These problems, which are known to Clay since he was ordered by Royall to solve them, seem to be so big that he does not want to take the responsibility of solving them."

Polk Murder Solved, Says Greek Aide

Athens, Greece, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Security Minister Constantin Rentis said today that the murder of George Polk has been solved.

Polk, Middle Eastern correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, was found dead in Salonika Bay last May. He had been shot through the head and his hands were tied together.

The Greek Government later announced that Polk was killed as the result of a Communist plot.

Rentis today announced the arrest of Mrs. Adma Mouzenides, whose husband, a fugitive has been accused of being the trigger man in the Polk murder.

He said the statements of Mrs. Mouzenides and others "entirely supported" those given by Gregory Staktopoulos, a Salonika newspaperman, and his mother. Staktopoulos was jailed last month when he allegedly admitted taking part in the murder.

Russia Calls For 'Probe' of Slave Labor

Lake Success, N. Y., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Russia called on the United Nations today to appoint an international commission of trade union members to conduct a world-wide investigation of "slave labor"—in capitalist and Communist countries alike.

Soviet Delegate Semyon Tsarapkin replied to last week's western charges, based largely on American Federation of Labor allegations, that slave labor was widespread in the Soviet Union.

Tsarapkin did not make it clear whether the international commission would actually go into the countries involved or merely gather its information from reports submitted to it.

He proposed that the commission be made up of 110 to 125 members chosen from trade union organizations of various countries, including the Russian Central Council of Trade Unions, the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the British Trades Union Congress, and the trade unions of France, Italy, China, Germany, India, Japan, and "of other national organizations of trade unions."

Tsarapkin's resolution contained a "kicker," which indicated it might be defeated in the council. He proposed that the membership of the projected international commission be selected on the basis of one representative for one million members of the trade unions.

On that basis, the commission would be overwhelmingly pro-Russian because the Central Council of Russian Trade Unions claims some 75 million members—more than most of the rest of the world's workers groups together.

Siam Fighting Ended After 50 Are Killed

Bangkok, Siam, Feb. 28 (AP).—Confused fighting which took at least 50 lives throughout this capital was blamed officially today on a weekend "misunderstanding" among the Siamese army, navy and marines.

It appeared that an attempt to overthrow the regime of Premier Phibun Songgram failed due to leakage which had caused declara- trigger-nervous guards near government buildings.

The public, which treated the tion of a state of emergency February 17.

Bangkok was fast approaching normal this afternoon, but some main streets were still blockaded. There was occasional rifle fire by disturbance of Saturday night and Sunday as a good show, was still trying to figure out the details.

The government announced it was all a "misunderstanding," but said 40 plotters had been arrested. Earlier, government statements indicated it was an attempted coup.

Army Officers Held as Spies

Paris, Feb. 28 (AP).—Two French army officers have been arrested as Communist spies and one of them has confessed, the Interior Ministry said today.

Maj. Louis-Georges Teulery, 37, has admitted he delivered military secrets to a foreign power, police said. The foreign government was not named.

The Communist afternoon newspaper Ce Soir said the foreign power probably is Yugoslavia.

Interior Minister Jules Moch told a cabinet meeting tonight that police action against Communists is continuing. He did not elaborate.

The second officer arrested was identified as a Captain Azema, an instructor of airborne troops. The police said he admitted giving information to a French Communist weekly newspaper.

Three Communist journalists and a defense plant draftsman already are under arrest on spy charges.

The case of all six will be dealt with my military courts, the government said. Treason charges were filed against Teulery.

The arrests marked a campaign by the government against Communists, launched after recent pro-Soviet statements by their leaders. These statements were to the effect that the French people should welcome the Red Army if it ever occupied France in pursuit of an aggressor, and that the French people "will never fight Russia."

Parliament was asked today to suspend the immunity of Florimund Bonte, press spokesman for the French Communist Party and one of its leaders in the National Assembly. The government already had asked that the immunity of Marcel Cachin, 79, another member of Parliament, be lifted. Cachin is director of the Communist daily newspaper L'Humanite.

Italian Firemen Threaten Strike Over Hit Tune

Rome, Italy, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Italian firemen threatened today to call a nation-wide strike unless the government suppresses the hit tune, "The Firemen of Viggiu."

The song, which has a lilting melody, tells of "swaggering" firemen who dress in fancy uniforms and blue-and-red-feathered caps to impress the maidens of Viggiu.

It says the firemen, frustrated at the lack of fires, set fire to Viggiu, only to discover that there was no water. In desperation, Armando Franga's popular ditty says, the firemen tried to put out the blaze with gasoline.

India Foiled Red Rebellion, Nehru Says

New Delhi, India, Feb. 28 (AP).—Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru told Parliament today a Communist plot to incite rebellion in India failed because of prompt government action, and the strength of public opinion.

Nehru accused Communist elements of "murder, arson, looting and sabotage." They have slain 200 members of the Hyderabad state Congress Party since India seized control of the big princely state in September, he said.

Violence in Calcutta Saturday, and recent destruction of the Calcutta telephone exchange, the Prime Minister charged, were the work of the Revolutionary Communist Party in India. This, he said, is a group which broke away from the original Communist Party of India "but collaborates with it on occasion."

He accused these groups of trying to foment a nation-wide railway strike to cripple the government, and of attempts to sabotage rail lines, telephone, telegraph and power stations. Communications systems have been placed under heavy guard since a police round-up of suspected Communist leaders started a week ago.

The Prime Minister said 879 railway employes have been arrested in efforts to head off a railway strike.

Indonesians Reject Dutch Parley Plan

Batavia, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Indonesian Republicans today rejected a Netherlands invitation to attend a round-table conference on the Indonesian problem at The Hague on March 12.

At the same time, the Republicans charged the Dutch had ignored United Nations Security Council resolutions aimed at bringing peace to Indonesia.

The Republican refusal came from the island of Bangka, where Republican leaders, including President Soerkarno, have been held in 'protective custody" by Dutch colonial officials since December.

Dr. Mohammed Rum, chairman of the Republican delegation at Bangka, cabled Batavia that "our (Republican) government will never take part in any action evading implementation of the Security Council's resolution."

Neutral sources, including members of the U. N. Good Offices Commission in Batavia, immediately indicated that the Republican refusal spelled doom for the proposed Hague conference.

Yesterday, pro-Dutch Indonesian Federalist leaders hailed the Netherlands conference proposal warmly, and promised cooperation in sovereignty discussions. However, observers said the Republican rejection has apparently dashed cold water on Dutch attempts to settle the Indonesian question outside the United Nations.

Indonesians to Submit New U. N. Proposals

New York, Feb. 28 (AP). — An Indonesian Republic spokesman said today his government would submit new proposals to the United Nations for settlement of the Dutch-Indonesian conflict.

L. N. Palar, chief U. N. Indonesian delegate, said they would reach the Security Council before March 12.

Retail Prices In Paris Decline 4 Pct. in Month

Paris, Feb. 28 (NYHT).—Hopes that the French inflation has been stopped were raised today by news of the greatest drop in Paris retail prices in any month since 1932. The official index, which is based mainly on food prices, was 4 per cent lower in February than in January.

While the decline was foreshadowed by an earlier drop in wholesale farm prices, it is likely to have important political and economic effects. It should strengthen the position of Premier Henri Queuille's "third force" government at a time when the country is in the midst of an election campaign.

'Axis Sally' Tells of Protesting Another's Use of Nickname

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Miss Mildred E. Gillars yesterdday emotionally told how she protested the use of the nickname "Axis Sally" by another woman broadcaster after the name had become identified with Miss Gillars.

The 48-year-old treason defendant also told a District Court jury she had refused to work with Lieut. Martin Monti (American deserter recently convicted of treason), and denounced him to her superior as "either a spy or a traitor!"

Miss Gillars' voice rose from a lifeless monotone used during much of her testimony to a pitch of emotion as she described how her erstwhile lover, Dr. Max Otto Koischwitz, tipped her in 1943 that a woman broadcasting from Rome was using the name "Axis Sally."

She said she demanded that the German Foreign Office investigate the matter.

"I told the Foreign Office that I could be responsible for everything I said but that I didn't want to be responsible for others giving out military information," the defendant asserted.

"I have at all times loved America," she wailed, "and I didn't want any confusion after the war as to what I had said.

"I told them that either the girl in Rome must stop calling herself 'Axis Sally' or I would leave the microphone—because I had never given out military information or muddled up GIs . . .

"My one aim was to stay in touch with America — the only way I could in my difficult position . . "

"Did you ever tell American soldiers to lay down their arms?" inquired Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin.

"Certainly not!" the witness answered with tearful indignation.

"Did you ever tell them to desert?"

"Certainly not!" Miss Gillars answered, continuing "Those who really heard me—those who really know . . . "

Her testimony here was cut short by an objection by Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., that the latter remarks were not responsive to the question.

"Did you ever tell American soldiers that their wives were going to bed with 4Fs?" Laughlin asked.

"Oh! Certainly not!"

Of the Monti incident, Miss Gillars testified: "This man (Monti) came into the room (in a Berlin broadcasting studio). He said 'Hello.' I just looked at him, turned around and walked out of the office without speaking. This was my one and only contact with him.

Tells of "Ultimatum"

"Directly after that I conferred with Houben (Adalbert Houben, former German radio official) and told him I was aware that a former American flier was now working at our station. I said 'that man is either a spy or a traitor and I refuse to work with either one. If you've been thinking I was a traitor all these years, I'm sorry it has taken me so long to find it out because I've never considered myself one and I don't think my German coworkers consider me one.'"

Then, Miss Gillars, continued, she delivered an ultimatum: "Either Monti is removed, or I go."

When Houben told her Monti would have to stay, she testified that she replied to him:

"All right. I've made my last broadcast!"

Earlier, Miss Gillars was cautioned by Federal Judge Edward M. Curran when, on the witness stand, she removed her earphones while a playback of one of her alleged broadcasts was being played.

Curran signaled her to replace the headset and despite her protest that she had heard the recording before, he instructed sternly: "Put them back on." She complied.

The broadcast "Survivors of the Invasion Front" contained phrases such as "I've told you often enough that I am an American and I'm over here on the German side . . . There is a good reason for it. And the reason is that this is a Jewish war . . . "

Denies Leggy Pose

In other testimony the defendant vehemently denied that she had adopted a leggy, alluring pose in an attempt to beguile a soldier into participating in a radio interview.

(The soldier, Michael Evanick, New York, a former paratrooper, previously had testified that Miss Gillars, minus undergarments, had sat down on a cot, crossed her legs above the knee and had opened a bottle of brandy as she talked about the interview.)

"Is that true?" Laughlin inquired after citing the testimony.

"Mr. Laughlin, it certainly is not!" Miss Gillars replied heatedly.

"I had exactly one summer dress at that time. It had a pleated skirt. I know I would not have sat on a cot because I did not want to get it soiled. I was standing the whole time, and I'm sure every woman . . . "

The rest of her statement was lost in a shouted objection by Prosecutor Kelley and Judge Curran's injunction to the defendant to confine her remarks to direct answering of questions.

She said the brandy had been produced by Werner Plack (former colleague of Miss Gillars on the German radio) who wanted to appear as a "hale fellow well met." Miss Gillars told the court she was indignant at the gesture because "I never had liquor introduced before at any of my broadcasts."

Under direct examination Miss Gillars admitted, as had been previously testified by a former soldier, that there had been a disturbance at a prison camp near Hammerstein, Germany, when she sought interviews.

But the occurrence, she ascribed to a combat-fatigued soldier who began screaming in an adjoining room making the rest of the GIs restive.

"The unpleasant things that happened afterward were the results of the outburst of this one boy," she said.

(Previous testimony was to the effect that Miss Gillars and Dr. Koischwitz were driven from the camp by the threats and oaths of the prisoners.)

With the guns of the victorious Americans being heard more and more clearly in Paris, Plack reneged on a promise to see her safely out of the French capital, Miss Gillars testified.

The professor had left for Berlin after a tour of POW camps with Miss Gillars, she said, continuing: "I reminded Plack of his promise to Dr. Koischwitz that he would see I got out of Paris in his car.

"Plack said: 'I'm sorry. I have no room, there is so much baggage.' He departed without me.

"I left on August 15, 1944," the defendant testified without explaining her means of transportation.

After stating that Koischwitz was not ill when he left Paris, Miss Gillars in dull, flat tones, described a premonition that he had died—and how this forewarning was authenticated.

"When I telephoned Berlin," she said, "I had a feeling something had happened. I asked for Dr. Koischwitz and at that moment I knew I'd never hear his voice again . . . I heard a voice say, 'Professor Koischwitz is dead. . .'"

The defendant, after explaining how difficult it was to get train space from Holland (where she had fled from Paris), described how she bribed a conductor with coffee for passage, arriving in Berlin in time for Koischwitz's funeral, September 4, 1944.

Miss Gillars is expected to complete her testimony today after which she will be subject, probably in the afternoon session, to cross-examination by Kelley.

Two additional defense witnesses, former German colleagues of Miss Gillars, will be called after Kelley completes his cross-examination. The case is expected to go to the jury probably Tuesday.

Reds Win Again in San Marino

Rome, Feb. 28 (NYHT).—Final returns in the national elections in San Marino, Europe's smallest and oldest republic, gave Communists and their allies a victory today by a margin of 2815 votes to 2010.

San Marino is a 38-square-mile, 1648-year-old country, only a fraction the size of New York City. It lies in the Apenine Mountains, near Venice, entirely surrounded by Italy.

Communists and their allies won 35 of the 60 seats in Parliament. The leftists lost 5 seats, compared to what they have had since the last election four years ago.

Hoover Group Proposes Vastly Increased Authority for the Secretary of Defense

and economic fabric can make the difference between democracy and totalitarianism, both for our Nation and for the whole world," the commission declares.

"Under these circumstances, we must hold the military rigidly accountable to the President, the Congress and the people. We must do this not only to safeguard our democratic traditions against militarism, but to insure that military policy shall be in close accord with national needs and national welfare; and also to insure that the huge military budget shall be used with efficiency, and that costs shall be commensurate with actual needs without damaging or destroying our national economy."

Forrestal's proposals of two months ago, which he mentioned yesterday, largely parallel those of the Hoover Commission. The latter goes a bit further in one or two respects, but largely the difference between lies in verbiage rather than the specific recommendations. The defense chief did not "talk" as strong as the commission, though proposing virtually the same thing.

He did not, for example, recommend reduction of the Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force to the status of Undersecretaries. But their authority, under his plan, would be just about that. He would keep for them the greater prestige of a "Secretary," because of the vast scope of their jobs.

Four members of the Hoover Commission dissented from the latter proposal on the same ground. They were: former President Herbert Hoover, chairman of the commission, Arthur S. Flemming, Carter Manasce, and George H. Mead.

There was another, more important dissent. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, James K. Pollock, James H. Rowe, jr., and Mead signed a minority report urging the creation of a single chief of staff for the armed forces, heading the Joint Chiefs. They declared such an official would take an "over-all strategic point of view" and so advise the Congress, President and Defense Secretary. He would have "staff functions only, not command functions" under the plan, and merely recommending decisions to the Secretary and President.

Criticizing the present operation of our defense forces, the commission declared that we now have a "federation" of defense agencies instead of one force, that there is lack of cooperation between the Research and Development Board, the JCS and the Central Intelligence Agency, and that the Joint Chiefs are "a law unto themselves."

In his comment on the report, Forrestal noted that he has largely employed civilian advisory boards to handle major defense problems. He mentioned the Hopley civil defense board, the Hook military pay group, the Gray board on civilian components, the Morgan committee on military justice and the Cooper medical committee.

He said the Hoover Commission was "under a misapprehension" in reporting that the Joint Chiefs had originally proposed a 30-million-dollar budget for 1950. The true figure was $16,900,000,000, he said.

Spelling out its recommendation for centralizing power in the Secretary of Defense, the Hoover report urges "full authority" for him over: (1) The budget and spending, (2) procurement, (3) personnel matters, including control of military education, training, promotions and transfers of officers and men between services.

Other recommendations:

(1) Better teamwork, through closer cooperation at the working committee level, of the JCS, CIA, Munitions Board, National Security Council Research and Development Board and National Security Resources Board.

(2) "Vigorous" steps to improve the CIA.

(3) Abolition of the post of chief of staff to the President.

(4) Prompt completion of "emergency plans for civilian and industrial mobilization" and that they be kept up-to-date.

(5) "Further steps" be taken to prepare plans for civil defense and internal security.

(6) Prompt development of defenses against unconventional methods of warfare and more vigorous attention paid to psychological warfare.

(7) An economical warfare program to be prepared by the NSRB

(8) That the armed force keep complete, accurate and current inventories of all supplies and equipment, at least in peacetime.

India Disappointed At Backward Area Plan

Lake Success, Feb. 28 (AP).—Britain, Belgium and Brazil expressed satisfaction today with an American plan of action on President Truman's program to help backward areas.

India, however, voiced disappointment in the resolution Assistant Secretary of State Willard L. Thorp laid before the United Nations Economic and Social Council Friday.

Only these four countries spoke out in the opening day of Council debate on the American plan to aid the backward sections.

Indian Delegate B. R. Sen said he was inspired by President Truman's program but he felt Thorp's speech and resolution had not come up to the expectations of many who had hoped for important financial aid from the United States.

Aid Funds Slash Unlikely

for the Marshall Plan, $5,300,000 was asked, and Congress cut this figure to $5,055,000.

Turning to ECA's Hoffman he noted that a "splendid" record has been made in the United Kingdom "despite the fact we took a quarter-billion off the figures last year."

Hoffman agreed, and in response to another question from Vandenberg admitted there is nothing "sacrosanct" about the requested 940 million dollars aid for Britain, but he stressed that as a general figure it is "rock-bottom."

"When you're getting down to talk of (lopping off) 10, or 20 million" from that, said Hoffman, you enter the realm of guesswork, but any significant reduction would be "disastrous to the whole European recovery effort."

Hoffman expressed great unhappiness with what he termed "purely political" statements made recently by some British officials without regard to the basic economics of Britain's financial position.

The speech which touched off the reopened hearings, was made before the United Nations Economic and Social Council by Charles P. Mayhew, British Undersecretary of State, said Hoffman, because Britain "had been needled by the Russians" about dependency upon American aid.

Mayhew, in stating that Britain was near enough to recovery to consider new "social and political experiments" was "making an appropriate reply—it was entirely political in character," said Hoffman.

To counteract effects of that speech, Sir Stafford Cripps, chancellor of the British Exchequer, on Saturday strongly emphasized that Britain's recovery is being achieved only because of Marshall Plan aid and that while a favorable import-export balance is being reached Britain has a major dollar deficit in its trade.

On Sunday, however, Hector McNeil, British Minister of State, was reported to have said in Scotland that Mayhew's "trouble" here was because he "blurted out the truth at the wrong time" about an approaching trade balance.

Hoffman said he asked the British Embassy for a full text of that news statement, and while it contained the quote above, found that it also stated that while Britain is nearing a trade balance, "inside this over-all picture there was a very great dollar deficiency. To help it out by 1952 would require the continuous effort of us all. Meanwhile, without the dollar aid, not only Britain but Europe would be starving."

Commented Hoffman, wryly, while searching in a brief case for some of the statements, "If the Britishers keep making statements I'll have to get a new brief case."

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) while examining a full text of Mayhew's statement, noted that despite the optimistic recovery phase at the end of it, Mayhew had stressed the role played by ECA funds. "In 1948," said Tydings, "to quote him precisely," ECA aid was "the difference between recovery and chaos."

Hoffman noted that the requested funds for Britain for the next fiscal year represent "24 per cent less than the 1948-49 program as compared with an over-all reduction of 15 per cent for the ECA countries as a whole."

He said representatives of ECA, and the Treasury, State and Commerce Departments were prepared to testify that "the U. K. program is a tight fit—that any reduction in it would adversely affect continued recovery in both the United Kingdom and western Europe.

"To test it," he said, a 200-million-dollar cut was analyzed, and it was found this would cause a 70-million-dollar drop in British export earnings and would cut British imports 270-million-dollars.

"We in ECA, goodness knows," said Hoffman, "are as much charged with protecting the dollar of the American taxpayer as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee."

When the proposed figure was being considered, said Hoffman, he told Sir Stafford Cripps that "nothing less than a drastic downward revision" of American aid should be asked this year, in order to taper off the four-year aid program as planned.

High Court Hears Plea for Marzani

Supreme Court Justice Wiley Rutledge yesterday told Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman that his construction of the Claims Act would make "every oral misrepresentation to an FBI man, or even a census taker," a criminal offense.

His remark was made during the court's reconsideration of a 4-4 vote which in effect upheld the conviction of Carl Aldo Marzani, former State Department employe acused of concealing alleged Communist connections.

Solicitor General Perlman countered with the argument that the language of Congress was clear, and that any "false statements," whether written or oral, made to Government agents, were punishable by the Claims Act.

Marzani's counsel Osmond K. Fraenkel, declared that his client's conviction, if upheld, would "open the door" to the punishment of "thousands of citizens" who might make false statements in informal talks with any Government agent.

The same law that was used against Marzani could be u-s-e-d against an office boy who goes to a baseball game after telling his Government boss he wanted the day off to attend his grandmother's funeral, declared Fraenkel.

Marzani Under Sentence

Marzani, who is under a one to three year prison sentence pending the result of his appeal, originally was indicted and convicted in District Court on 11 counts. The U. S. Court of Appeals threw out nine counts under the statute of limitations.

The two counts under appeal charged Marzani, 37-year-old former Office of Strategic Services agent, with false statements concealing Communist ties, made during a conversation with a State Department superior in 1946. Allan K. Rosenberg, representing Marzani, stressed that it was merely an "informal" chat.

Ban on Reds Proposed in Many States

Thirteen States are considering proposals to bar Communists from public jobs.

Some measures before Legislatures would require persons on public payrolls, including teachers, to take loyalty oaths. Other bills are aimed at keeping Communists out of a wide range of positions.

Would Outlaw Party

Maryland and Illinois are studying suggestions for outlawing the Communist Party.

Oaths of loyalty or allegiance to the United States would be required of public school teachers and college and university professors in Oklahoma, Nebraska and New Hampshire.

All public officials and candidates for public office would have to take such oaths in California.

In Texas, all State officials and employes, including those in schools that get money from the State, would have to swear they never have been members of the Communist Party, or other subversive group.

In Arkansas, all public employes, including teachers, would have to sign affidavits that they are not Communists before they get their salaries.

New York Measure

In New York, all civil service employes of State and city governments, and teachers and professors, would have to take non-Communist oaths.

Gov. Herman Talmadge has signed a Georgia law requiring all State workers and officials to disavow the Communist Party.

Other bills designed to keep Communists off public payrolls are pending in seven States. They cover public offices in New York, and State jobs in California, Massachusetts and Oregon. They apply to any elective or appointive public office in West Virginia.

Illinois would bar Communists from all jobs supported by public funds, including teaching positions, and rule them out as candidates. The proposed ban in New Mexico would blanket employes of the State or any of its political subdivisions.

A Texas measure would deprive Communist candidates of a place on the ballot.

In Trial of 11

Communists Call Judge As Witness

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Counsel for 11 indicted American Communist leaders today subpenaed the senior judge of the New York Federal District to appear Tuesday as one of their witnesses.

They called on Judge John C. Knox to produce the text of a speech he made January 22 in Uniontown, Pa., defending the way Federal juries are picked here.

The system has been under fire by the defense almost continuously since the 11 members of the Communist Party's national committee went on trial January 17. As a result, no jury has been selected.

The Communists are charged with conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the United States Government.

Defense lawyers have been given until the end of the court session Tuesday by Federal Judge Harold R. Medina, the trial judge, to finish their arguments against the jury system. Medina also has set March 7 as the tentative date for the beginning of the actual prosecution.

World Bank Lends Belgium $16 Million

A 16-million-dollar loan to Belgium was granted yesterday by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

The first World Bank grant to Belgium, the loan is for a 20-year period and will bear interest at 4¼ per cent, including the regular 1 per cent commission for the Bank's special reserve.

Construction of two steel mills and a power plant in the Liege district will be financed by the loan, the Bank anounced.

Recovery "Very Rapid"

Belgium's postwar recovery, said the Bank, "thus far has been very rapid," and while "Belgium's global balance of payments is approaching equilibrium, there is still a considerable deficit in its balance of payments with the western hemisphere.

"This deficit is likely to persist," said the Bank, "and Belgium's capacity to meet dollar payments in the future will depend upon its ability to earn convertible currencies through trade with other countries."

Last year, Belgium obtained 33 million dollars in short-term loans from the International Monetary Fund, and 50 million dollars in credits over a five-year period, arranged through the Export-Import Bank. Of the latter amount, commercial banks put up 18 million dollars.

In 1947, the Belgian Embassy said yesterday, Belgium had a 450-million-dollar deficit in balance of payments in world trade, and in 1948 this was cut to 256 million dollars.

Under the Marshall Plan, Belgium and Luxembourg, which use the same currency, are to receive a total of $247,900,000 in aid during fiscal 1948-49 under present proposals, and 200 million dollars in aid is sought for the two countries and colonies in fiscal 1949-50.

Soviet Union No Match in 100 Years for U. S. Warplane Output Potential, Says Wilson

By a Staff Correspondent

Lockland, Ohio, Feb. 28.—Russia cannot match this Nation's warplane production potential within the next century, Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric Co., declared today.

Wilson, wartime War Production Board vice chairman, recalled that the United States reached a peak rate of more than 8000 planes a month in 1944 and added "no other nation in the world can do that today. I doubt if a certain nation behind the iron curtain can reach such a rate within 100 years."

He spoke at dedication exercises of a new GE jet engine assembly and test plant here.

Two General Electric J-47 power plants were turned over to the Air Force today, five months after operations got under way here. GE uses one small section of the huge factory which turned out Wright piston engines during the war. The J-47, which has three times the thrust power of the original Air Force jet engines, well over 5000 pounds, already is in production at GE's Lynn, Mass., plant. The company has an order for 2000 of the engines, which the Air Force says is the most powerful now in production in the world.

Earlier, Wilson told reporters that to his best information Russia does not yet have a jet aircraft engine of its own. They are building the British new jet power plant, however, he noted.

General Electric announced the J-47 is installed in the Air Force's B-45 jet bomber. It also powers the F-86 fighter which holds the world speed record of 670.9 miles an hour.

The J-47 is a turbojet having multiple combustion chambers and axial flow turbine. It burns either refined kerosene or high octane gasoline. Exhaust temperatures reach such high temperatures that new heat-resistant alloys had to be designed for parts of the engine.

C. M. Michaels, chief USAF engineer for the J-47, described the engine as a "very encouraging development in jet propulsion progress" but "only a stepping stone" toward much better engines on the way. Despite its greater power, the J-47 has no greater specific fuel consumption than its predecessor, the J-35. Wilson said he believed Congress should boost 1950 Air Force appropriations above the 4.6 billions proposed by President Truman.

Peacetime Army Hero Gets Medal

Sergt. Robert L. Hodgkiss, Fayettville, N. C., paratrooper jumpmaster, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross yesterday for directing 36 men to parachute to safety while he rode down with a disabled plane.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, presented the medal in his Pentagon office. The award normally is made only for heroic service in combat.

Hodgkiss' wife, Pearl, and his mother, Mrs. Edward Taylor, Mount Pleasant, Ohio, were among those present.

Hodgkiss was a jumpmaster aboard a C-82 flying boxcar on a routine training parachute jump flight at Fort Bragg, N. C., on January 14, when the plane's engines failed at an extremely low altitude. He ordered the paratroopers to jump in a period much less than ordinarily required.

By the time the last man had cleared, the plane was too low for Hodgkiss to jump. He was unhurt when the ship crashed and burned. He broke into the pilot's compartment to carry out injured and dead crew members.

German Reds In Cominform

Berlin (Tuesday) March 1 (U.P.). Sources close to the Russian administration said early today that German Communists had been admitted into the Communist Bureau of Information and at the same time ordered to go slow in order not to make Soviet-Western relations any worse.

Informants said that the new situation would entail a drastic change in policy, adopted in hope that the Russians could attain their political ends in Germany by purely political means.

The sources quoted said that the Communist or Socialist Unity party in the Russian occupation zone had been admitted to full membership in the Cominform.

At the same time it was said that the Communists had been told to go slow in their activities until after the conclusion of the Atlantic defense pact and the signing of an Austrian treaty.

Informants said that Walter Ulbricht, so-called brains of German communism, was ordered to hold up any action toward forming an Eastern German regime until the Western German regime being organized by the United States, Great Britain and France had become a reality.

The entire new policy was represented as the result of Russian hope that the Western allies could be ousted from Berlin by peaceful means.

Informants said they believed that Russian power in Germany was being removed from the hands of Soviet propaganda and political chief Col. Sergei Tulpanov and given to Russian "Ambassador" D. S. Semjonov, who is political adviser to Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Soviet commander in chief.

It is the understanding here that Semjonov advocates a purely diplomatic solution of the cold war.

has sanctioned, can in that way be undermined by State action. The Federal policy thus becomes a formula of empty words."

The Wisconsin employment peace act provides in part:

"It shall be an unfair labor practice for an employe individually or in concert with others: . . . to take unauthorized possession of property of the employer or to engage in any concerted effort to interfere with production except by leaving the premises in an orderly manner for the purpose of going on strike."

In another labor case, the court held, 6-3, that an employer who owns the only meeting hall in a company town may not prohibit its use by a union.

Justice Murphy read the court's opinion. Justice Reed wrote a dissent, in which he was joined by Chief Justice Vinson. Jackson also wrote a dissent.

The case originated in North Belmont, N. C. The Stowe Spinning Co. and three affiliated firms acknowledged refusing permission to the CIO United Textile Workers to use the only hall in the town. It had in the past been used by other organizations.

The NLRB held this refusal was an unfair labor practice. The high court upheld the board, but sent the case back for a rewording of its order, which the court said was too broad.

Court-Martial Trial Voided

have been court-martialed if he had not reenlisted.

In New York Navy officials quoted Hirshberg as saying "I am very happy about the outcome."

The Supreme Court yesterday refused to review Douglas Chandler's conviction for wartime treason.

The refusal has the effect of upholding the conviction.

Chandler, a former Baltimore writer, was accused of betraying his country by serving in Germany as a Nazi propagandist. He used the name "Paul Revere" in making recordings for Radio Berlin to broadcast to the United States.

Convicted in Federal Court in Boston, Chandler was sentenced to life imprisonment and fined $10,000.

The Supreme Court unanimously upheld a South Crolina law which bars any tieup between the life insurance and underfaking businesses.

Justice Murphy delivered the court's decision.

The South Carolina law (a) bans life insurance companies and their officers, agents and employes from operating an undertaking establishment: (b) makes it unlawful for an insurance company to contract with an undertaker to conduct the funeral of a person insured by the company, and (c) prohibits an undertaker and his employes from being licensed as insurance agents.

Pulp and Paper Mill Closes in Virginia

West Point, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—One of the first major signs of a decline on Virginia's industrial front appeared today with the shutdown of the pulp and paper mills of the Chesapeake Corp. here.

The plant, which employs about 700 workers and is West Point's industrial mainstay, has halted operations for an indefinite period, said M. C. McDonald, president of the corporation.

However, McDonald said he was "optimistic" about the reopening of the mills. McDonald, ill in bed from an attack of flu, blamed lack of orders for the closing.

"Notices of the closing which we hope will be only temporary were posted Friday," he said. "As soon as orders pick up we'll get back on the production line at whatever capacity the orders warrant."

McDonald said he was not discouraged at all about conditions in the sulphite pulp and kraft paper board industry, in which the local corporation is one of the largest.

The company president said the office staff and maintenance crews still were operating and that the corporation would utilize this shutdown time to install and tie in some new machinery.

The Chesapeake Corp. shut down affects not only the town of West Point where it virtually dominates the economic scene, but also was having immediate repercussions in a large portion of Tidewater Virginia from which it draws its raw material.

Fleming Would Acquire Sites for Future Use

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator, said yesterday there is no intention now to embark on any big public building program.

Fleming told the House Public Works Committee, however, that "We should acquire sites at this time for needed public buildings, along with plans and specifications, to be put on the shelf."

He said they could be ready "so we could start immediately" if there is a falling off in the construction industry.

Fuller Brush Reduces Some Work Weeks

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 28. (U.P.)—Some departments of the Fuller Brush Co., went on a 32-hour week today because of "overproduction in certain lines."

The cut-back from a 40-hour week will be temporary, according to Wallace E. Campbell, vice president in charge of industrial relations.

Railroads and Nonoperating Unions to Redraft Proposals

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Nation's railroads and representatives of one million nonoperating workers agreed today to redraft their formulas for settling their stubborn wage-and-hour dispute.

The new proposals, centering on how to apply a 40-hour five-day work week, will be brought to the meeting room Wednesday afternoon.

The decision for a new try at settlement followed a supplemental report made today by a presidential fact-finding board investigating the dispute. Each side said the new definition upheld its position.

The question of how the present 48-hour week is to be shortened for the members of 16 unions involved is the last of many hurdes to an agreement.

Carriers and union spokesmen have both declared they are willing to accept a presidential fact-finding board's recommendations on the 40-hour week. And, on the surface, they appear close to agreement.

The railroad spokesmen have said they are willing to apply the 40-hour week "in accordance with the recommendations of the board" and "be governed by the board's report with respect to the other matters it covered."

The unions stated today the board members' "interpretation of their recommendation on the five-day week . . . sustains the position of the employes," and "peaceful settlement . . . depends on the acceptance by the carriers of this interpretation."

Neither side would say what details of disagreement persist.

The three-member fact-finding board, headed by Dr. William M. Leiserson, was called into conferences of the negotiators to give a clearer picture of their intent in recommending the shorter work week.

The shorter work week, the board said, was proposed to (1) give employes two days rest each week, and (2) to spread and maintain employment.

"Its purpose was not to obtain more pay for employes through overtime on the sixth and seventh day of the week," the statement continued.

The board said it intended that employes be granted Saturday and Sunday off in as many instances as possible, but recognized that work weeks would have to be staggered in many instances, and did not intend that penalty rates be paid for Saturday and Sunday work when it was necessarily part of the five-day week.

White House Newsmen Elect Nixon

Robert Gray Nixon, White House reporter for the International News Service, yesterday was elected president of the White House Correspondents' Association. He succeeds Ernest B. Vaccaro of the Associated Press.

Nixon

Tom Twitty of the New York Herald-Tribune was elected vice president, and Paul Wooton of the New Orleans Times Picayune and Chilton Publications was reelected secretary treasurer. Elected to the executive board were Carleton V. Kent of the Chicago Sun-Times, Jack Doherty of the New York Daily News, and Joseph H. Short of the Baltimore Sun.

Nixon, who will be inaugurated as president at the association's annual dinner at the Statler next Saturday night, has been with International News Service for 20 years, serving here and abroad.

Tobin, Thomas Discuss Labor Bill Changes

By the United Press

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin conferred late yesterday with Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), of the Senate Labor Committee on amendments to the Administration's new labor bill.

They met after Democratic committee members had discussed whether some amendments to the measure to repeal the Taft-Hartley law might help it through Congress. Tobin also met with the House Labor Committee which will consider today its own approach to a labor bill.

Thomas said he and Tobin discussed three principal amendments. They would grant the Government power to obtain injunctions in national emergency strikes keep the Conciliation Service as a separate Government agency, and retain the non-Communist affidavit requirement of the Taft-Hartley law.

Thomas, who is opposed to any amendments to the Administration bill, said he and Tobin reached no conclusions. Nor were any decisions reached at the Democratic strategy huddle, although Thomas said there were wide discussions on whether amendments should be offered.

Some Southern Democrats reportedly were ready to fight for a provision which would save State anticlosed shop laws. Chairman Paul Herzog of the National Labor Relations Board had told the committee the Administration bill would, in effect, repeal State laws outlawing the closed shop.

The Taft-Hartley law, which the Administration measure would repeal, bans the closed shop, but permits the union shop.

Committee Action Postponed

Meanwhile, Administration Democrats on the House Labor Committee agreed at a closed-door meeting to fight for an immediate raise in the national minimum wage to 75 cents an hour.

They failed to agree, however, on how many additional workers should be covered by the wage-hour law and called another meeting for late today. As a result, full committee action on the minimum wage law, originally scheduled for today, was postponed.

House Democratic leaders have been trying to work out a compromise among committee Democrats to prevent scuttling of President Truman's campaign promise to boost the minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents.

A coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats on the committee has opposed the Administration plan to extend the wage-hour coverage to an additional five million workers.

No Bread 'Famine' Expected in N. Y.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—It'll be crackers instead of bread and cake in many New York City homes Wednesday as a result of the shutdown of six major baking companies which make 70 per cent of the city's wrapped bread and cake.

"No famine" is expected, however, said an official of the New York State Food Merchants Association, since several other firms still were producing white bread.

A strike order by AFL teamsters against the Continental Baking Co. —effective last midnight—led the five other companies to suspend operations.

Retail stores in West Side mid-Manhattan showed they had enough packaged bread left over from Saturday to last until noon today. The grocers said they did not receive any supplies from the six major bakeries.

However, chain stores, delicatessens and independent bakeries in midtown East Side reported they had "plenty of bread" despite the strike.

Dr. Bowman, District Pastor, To Head Bridgewater College

Bowman

Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor of Washington City Church of the Brethren, 4th and North Carolina ave. se., since 1937, has been named president of Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Bowman announced his resignation to his congregation on Sunday and will assume his duties at Bridgewater in July, Charles W. Wampler chairman of the Bridgewater board of trustees said.

The president-elect is a graduate of Bridgewater College and received M. A. and Ph.D. degrees in education from the University of Chicago. He is a veteran of World War I.

He was for seven years associate professor of education and principal of the training school at Farmville, (Va.) State Teachers College. In 1930 he became head of the department of education and psychology and dean of men at Juniata College, Huntington, Pa. Dr. Bowman also taught during summer sessions at Emory University, Duke University, the University of Virginia, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and George Peabody Teachers College.

He becomes the fifth president of Bridgewater College, and succeeds Dr. J. I. Baugher, who resigned last March because of ill health. Dr. Charles C. Wright has been acting president.

Dr. Bowman served as chairman of the Washington Federation of Churches committee on marriage and the home, for 10 years and was formerly a member of the ...deration social welfare committee. He is vice chairman of the commission on marriage and the home, of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

He is a member of the board of Christian Education of the Church of the Brethern and was moderator of the denomination in 1944. Dr. Bowman has written several books on marriage and the Christian family.

New Paraguayan Cabinet Is Appointed

Asuncion, Paraguay, Feb. 28 (U.P.) Provisional President Felipe Molas Lopez today formed a nine-man, all-civilian cabinet to replace the ousted provisional regime of Gen. Raimundo Rolon.

The new government was sworn in at a ceremony held less than 48 hours after the end of the bloodless, four-hour coup Saturday which overthrew Rolon, and installed Molas Lopez.

All of the ministers of the new cabinet are leaders of the Colorado Party, Paraguay's only legal political organization. Four are carryovers from the Rolon regime.

Kin Term Holober Confusing Mixture

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Charles F. Holober, confessed murderer, was described yesterday by his Hungarian father and British mother as a confusing mixture of genius and failure, braggart and coward, creative artist and lonely melancholic.

Holober was rejected for military service, according to his mother, as a schizoid personality, a soil for mental illnesses considered a poor risk by the Army and Navy.

All this is part of the man who said he shot his estranged wife to death, buried his baby daughter alive, dug them a grave in the wet earth of Fairfax County, Va.

Both his parents were asked what single external fact had most influenced their son. They gave different answers.

Isador Holober, behind the counter of his watch and jewelry repairing store at 1214 7th st. nw., yesterday told of one day in Jersey City when his second son was in his early teens, and suddenly injected into a tough neighborhood.

The young Charles Holober got into a fight. His opponent picked up a large section of railroad tie and threw it at the boy's head. His aim was good. A 2-foot splinter remained sticking from the boy's head, after the tie itself had fallen to the ground. The wound required three stitches.

"He was always crazy after that," Holober, sr., said simply.

Unsuccessful Love Affair

Bertha Holober yesterday minimized the head blow as an important influence on the boy.

She described an unsuccessful love affair her son had had only six years ago, as the most significant event in his life.

For the only time in his life, Mrs. Holober said, her son was in love with a girl from New York who held a wartime job in Washington. While they saw each other, Holober held his job for more than a year, longer than he ever held any other job. He gave the girl a wrist watch and a dinner ring.

But this love affair was frustrated, when the girl's mother decreed that Holober lacked sufficient station and stature to marry her daughter.

"He never even tried after that," Mrs. Holober said simply.

The world will never know the complete case history of the introspective little men, with the sallow complexion, thick glasses, and prominent front teeth who played the violin beautifully at 13 and confessed to murder at 40.

Known as Beautiful

But the notebook of a psychoanalyst listening to the true story of the life of Charles Holober would contain at least the following information.

As a child in New York City and Jersey City, he was known as "beautiful." Grocery store owners urged his mother to enter him in child beauty contests.

In schools, he was bright. He did not have to learn by studying, but absorbed information quickly. He played the violin exceptionally well, outstripping his teachers.

As long as he can remember he wanted to write poetry, short stories, novels, anything. He started thousands of "works," finished only one.

As a 16-year-old student in Central High School in Washington, he was so inspired by the death of Movie Idol Rudolph Valentino that he wrote a poem to his memory. The poem was published by a Washington newspaper, according to his mother, the one published work of Charles Holober.

Six or seven years ago, he joined a Virginia nudist camp, the site of the murder he confessed two days ago. He played the violin in later life, only at this camp.

Holober was a man of unorthodox eating habits. He consumed quantities of chocolate candy, rarely consumed more than one meal a day, and often went without food for two or three days at a time. His father said the boy felt better with an empty stomach.

He did not drink and rarely smoked.

He seldom spent more than $10 per week, $6 of which he gave to his estranged wife for their child.

Although he regarded the movies as a waste of time, he went regularly to kill time.

Holober habitually forgot work which he did not enjoy. When asked to help his aging and ailing father at the store he would promise to do so, then fall asleep on the trolley en route and sleep throughout the day on the trolley car.

Only when in love with the girl he lost did Holober keep a job for more than a few months. On five occasions he was employed by the Government; on five occasions he was fired.

Although seven members of his family were in the service during World War II and Holober tried to enlist, he was branded as unfit emotionally for military duty. One brother is even now an Army lieutenant in Japan.

Holober was not interested in girls, but deeply attached to his mother and always apart from his father. Mrs. Holober denied yesterday the charge made by her other children that Charles was her favorite child. She admits paying great attention to him, but said her emotion was more sympathy than love.

"I felt he was hurting himself so," she said. "He should be somebody and he is nobody."

"Maybe we just didn't understand him," she added.

Cluttered Attic Room

The confessed murderer lived in an attic room at the Girard st. address. No member of the family was allowed to enter the room. His mother left a clean sheet and a clean pillow case at the bottom of the stairs once a week.

When the family entered the room last Friday, they were amazed at what they saw.

Mrs. Holober gave the following description of the room.

The floor was cluttered with books and newspapers piled helter skelter in dust three inches deep.

An inch of dust "as thick as fur" coated the huge desk which Holober had been given by "Isabel," a girl whom Holober described as the only woman except his mother who understood him.

In his typewriter, rested an uncompleted poem to a man Mrs. Holober described as his "one friend."

The poem was to Josiah Lyman, Mrs. Holober said.

Josiah Lyman is a lawyer now helping to defend Holober against two charges of murder.

The contents of the poem were not revealed.

Holober was born in New York City, and for the first 14 years of his life lived in New York and Jersey City. He grew fast, but never added an inch to his five-foot-nine inch frame after he was 16. His complexion turned sallow, especially in hot weather after he was 17, his mother said. He was fidgety, nervous, moody, melancholy, cowardly, spoiled, but heart-warming, kind, earnest and clever, Mrs. Holober said yesterday.

"But he has committed a terrible crime," she said.

His father wants to see him committed to an institution, and maybe cured.

Business has not been good for the last two years, he said. Raising $50,000 bond is out of the question, he said.

"What good can I do now?"

cided something would have to be done.

Under terms of a Juvenile Court agreement, Holober paid $6 a week for support of the child. He visited his wife once a week at the home of her parents, 931 New York ave. nw., where she lived, to pay the $6.

Last Wednesday night when he visited the home of the wife, Holober said in his confessio, he decided to kill her the following day.

He said he knew she had always been curious about the nudist camp to which he belonged, so he suggested that she accompany him there the following day.

On Thursday, according to the confession, he borrowed the car of his sister, placed a shovel and a mattock in the trunk compartment and armed himself with a German automatic of about .32 caliber.

He said he left his home at about 12:30 p. m., stopped at a filling station for some gas, and then picked up his wife and child.

Then he said, they drove into Virginia, arriving at the nudist camp at about 2:45 p. m. After that, according to the confession:

They talked briefly in the car. The wife got out of the car. Holober followed her. She was in a stooping position, her back to him, when he fired the first shot into her head

She toppled over. She was still alive. She cried weakly, "Charlie." He fired again, into her back.

Holober then took his tools from the trunk of the car and spent the next hour digging a grave beside the body of his wife. He rolled her in, face up.

The baby was in the back seat of the car. He tried to shoot the infant but the automatic jammed. He debated momentarily beating the child to death with the shovel or gun butt but decided he couldn't. He placed the infant in the grave at the mother's feet.

Before he shoveled earth into the grave, he stripped a wedding ring, another inexpensive ring and a wrist watch from the mother.

He also buried with his wife a red handbag in which she carried diapers and nursing bottles for the baby.

After he had covered the dead mother and live child, he evened off the grave with the flat of the shovel, then jumped up and down on the grave to pack the earth tight. He covered the grave with leaves to disguise the freshly turned earth.

Holober said he then returned to his car and drove back down the lane leading to the road. About 150 or 200 yards from the grave, when he had almost reached the road, the car became mired in the mud.

He tried rocking the car. He tried to dig it out of the mud. It remained stuck.

"I knew the Devil must have been pointing his finger at me and laughing," he told police.

He remained in his car that night. On Friday morning, he thumbed a ride into Falls Church and from there took a bus into Washington.

He arranged to have the car pulled out of the mud and reported to police that his wife and child were missing. He said that his wife had abruptly left the car after it got stuck and started walking toward Washington.

County police and Boy Scouts combed the area for the missing mother and child Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Holober himself joined the search Saturday.

On Sunday at about 5 p.m., as the search party was preparing to discontinue its efforts for the day, William Wallace, 12, a Boy Scout, of 616 Gordon st., Falls Church, noticed that he had trod on a patch of soft ground. Police started digging and unearthed the two bodies.

The red leather handbag covered the child's face. The infant's tiny hands were clenched and gripped earth as though it had tried to claw away the dirt.

While the search was still under way Sunday afternoon, Detective Sergt. George W Cook of the Metropolitan Police homicide squad visited Holober's home and talked to him. Holober stuck to his story.

After word was received by Washington police that the bodies had been recovered, Cook returned to the house. Holober wasn't there. Cook waited. He was soon joined in his vigil by Detective Sergt. Harold C. Hoffman, also of the homicide detail.

When Holober returned home at about 12:30 a.m., he told the detectives he had been to the Trans-Lux Theater and had been "killing time" downtown. When the detectives told him the bodies had been found, Holober expressed disbelief.

When the detectives described exactly where the bodies were found and other details, Holober, they said, broke down and admitted the murders.

Holober was taken to the Tenth Precinct where, Cook said, he told about the murders.

Cook said Holober showed excitement at only one point, when he asked if he would go to the electric chair for the crime.

Produces Gun, Jewelry

After the questioning, Holober returned with the two Washington detectives to his home and produced for them the jewelry he had taken from his wife. They said he also took them into the attic and showed them where the automatic was hidden above the rafters.

When he appeared before Judge Walter J. Casey of Municipal Court for the extradition hearing, Holober was represented by Attorney Denver H. Graham.

Holober, who periodically has worked as a clerk in his father's jewelry store at 1214 7th st. nw., was badly in need of a shave and his hair was mussed.

He wore a blue shirt open at the throat, a green suit and a long navy blue overcoat. He smiled every now and then during his brief courtroom appearance.

Courtroom observers saw before them a stocky man, about 5 feet 9, weighing about 175 pounds. His hair was thinning, his complexion dark. He had a slight chin and wore glasses.

Led Out Handcuffed

When Holober waived extradition through his attorney he was handcuffed to Fairfax Detective Sergt. Cecil E. Brown and led from the courtroom.

As he stepped into a elevator to go downstairs, he was heard to remark that he hadn't been able to sleep the previous night.

"I spread my overcoat on the floor, but I couldn't sleep," he said.

"They'll have an innerspring mattress for you in Fairfax," said a Washington detective.

Holober joined in the general laughter.

In the confession made to Detective Sergeant Brown and Detective Lieut. Grafton L. Wells of the Fairfax police, Holober said he decided to kill his wife because "she failed to live up to her part of the agreement of our marriage."

The agreement, he explained, was that he give the child a name and that was all. But recently, he said, she kept after him about setting up their own home.

Fairfax police said they got the impression from talking to Holober that getting stuck in the mud foiled his entire murder plot, that otherwise he would never have reported his wife missing.

Knew Her for 10 Years

Holober told police he had known the woman about 10 years and had become intimate with her about two years ago.

In his confession, he said he felt bad about burying the baby, that it was hard to do, but that he had to do it.

He said he had chosen the nudist camp as the scene for his plan because he was familiar with the neighborhood. He had been a member of the nudist camp, which is closed this time of year, since 1940.

Holober said he hid the shovel and mattock in bushes near the scene of the crime. Both have been recovered. Questioned about the automatic, he said he had purchased it three or four years ago from a friend in Washington.

Detective Lieutenant Wells said if weather conditions are favorable today, Holober will be taken to the scene for a reenactment of the crime. Roads in the area were too muddy for this yesterday.

The bodies of the mother and child were formally identified yesterday morning at Arlington Hospital by Mrs. Holober's father, Irving Garner. He was accompanied to the hospital by his brother, Leo G. Garner, and his brother-in-law, Samuel Corman.

Meanwhile, Dr. Nelson Podolnick, Fairfax County coroner, announced that the infant had died of suffocation and the mother of gunshot wounds. One bullet penetrated the woman's brain, he said, and the other went through her heart.

When Holober talked to reporters in Fairfax, he spoke in a quiet, conversational tone.

He said he was born in New York City and that his family moved to Washington in 1921. He was graduated from Central High School in 1927, he said, and since then has worked off and on for his father.

He added the information that he had also been employed as a Government clerk but wouldn't say where.

"Just say I was a Government clerk in several departments," he told reporters.

He said he was rejected for military service during World War II. Why?

"I'd rather not discuss that," he replied.

Gen. Feldman Named For Army Post

President Truman yesterday nominated Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman to be Quartermaster General of the Army.

Feldman would succeed Maj. Gen. Thomas B. Larkin. He has been an assistant to Larkin since February 1, 1946. Larkin is being assigned to a new post.

Feldman, 60, is a native of New York City. He enlisted in the artillery in 1907. He has been in the quartermaster department since 1931.

HAPPIEST NEWS OF '49
Dynaflow's on the Super Line

This one you've just got to see!

Got to see the room in its big and even more spacious interiors.

Got to see the brand-new outlook you get from wide, curved windshields, narrower corner posts, stepped-up glass area.

Got to see the comfort that's all through it, in everything from new Deep-Cradle seat cushions to oversize tires on extra-wide rims and the magic levelness of soft coil springs all round.

Most of all – it's a must to see how sweet the Buick SUPER is with Dynaflow Drive!

Feel the lift in its Fireball power plant, stepped up to a brilliant 120 hp. Sample the new quiet of engines with self-setting valve lifters that keep tappets from tapping throughout its lifetime.

Know the silken swoop and restful ease of the only transmission of its kind in the country – Dynaflow Drive, in which oil does it all and no gears ever shift!

You can have Dynaflow Drive as optional equipment on any of the brilliant 1949 SUPERS – 4-door Sedan, Sedanet, Convertible and Estate Wagon.

Just specify it when you place your order – and since plenty of others will be doing just that, better see your dealer now and get your order in, with or without a car to trade.

Oil does it all in DYNAFLOW DRIVE

There's no clutch pedal in Dynaflow Drive. And no gears that shift. Instead, the engine makes oil whirl in this drum. And it whirls in such a unique and special way that whatever kind of power you need – for starting, climbing, accelerating, cruising – is instantly delivered to the rear wheels. You just set a lever, press the gas treadle – and the power plant does the rest.

White sidewall tires, as illustrated, available at extra cost.

Abuse Of The Schools

Arlington County is beginning to seethe over the issue of sectarian religion taught in the public schools. The mere fact that various religious groups are fighting over the matter is evidence, it seems to us, that the Arlington program is objectionable. A Protestant minister stated the philosophy of the movement when he said in effect: "If we can't get the children on Sunday, we have to get them in the schools."

The Arlington program, which has been in effect several years, operates under an opinion of the Virginia attorney general that nonsectarian religious instruction in school buildings, without official school support, is not in conflict with the Supreme Court decision in the McCollum case at Champaign, Ill. Cards prepared by the Protestant sponsors of the program are passed out to children, supposedly outside school buildings, although that rule is not always adhered to. Parents are asked to indicate on these cards whether or not they wish their children to participate. Classes are held in school buildings one hour a week on school time under the instruction of an outside minister. Students whose parents indicate opposition are not compelled to attend.

Regardless of the pretenses, however, sectarianism is not kept out of the classes. The syllabus used by the Arlington Council on Religious Education assumes the supremacy of Christ, a doctrine not included in the belief of some sects. Catholic and Jewish children sometimes sit in on the classes because they do not like to appear "queer," or different from their fellow pupils. The coercive power of the public schools is being used to teach, not religious values in a broad sense, but a particular version of religion. Justice Black stated the point cogently in his opinion in the McCollum case:

> Here not only are the State's tax-supported public school buildings used for the discussion of religious doctrines. The State also affords sectarian groups an invaluable aid in that it helps to provide pupils through use of the State's compulsory public school mechanism. This is not separation of church and state.

Arlington may well furnish a more precise test of the constitutionality of such instruction, for opponents have charged that the program is an attempt to bootleg sectarianism into the schools in defiance of the McCollum decision. In no sense can the opposition to the program be regarded as antireligious, for it is made up largely of religious groups, including several Protestant denominations. The issue is one of principle as stated in the Constitution. To say that the framers of that document were predominantly Protestant is not to say that they condoned intermingling of religion and public education. Freedom for all religions with compulsion for none has always been a particular genius of the American system. Surely religious institutions are strong enough to stand without leaning on the schools in a way that violates the basic concept of religious freedom.

Congressional Time

The municipal assembly of this city functions also as the Congress of the entire United States. No other city can make this statement. Perhaps we should deem it an honor that Congress takes time out from pressing national and international problems to deliberate over such municipal ordinances as Daylight Saving Time for little us. But it doesn't seem a very efficient or sensible use of congressional time and energy.

The Senate, to be sure, has passed a bill giving the District Commissioners permanent authority to make the annual decision on Daylight Saving Time. But a House District Subcommittee has insisted on sticking to the old way of congressional debate and legislation each year. Apparently this is a matter of more moment than we had thought. In the minds of some Congressmen, at least, it must rank along with crime and punishment as an issue only Congress can adequately deal with.

If it is so vital a matter that Congress must take it up each year, why was it not mentioned in the party platforms and made a subject of campaign debate? We fear many Congressmen may have to vote on it without really knowing how their constituents feel about Daylight Saving Time in the District. We also fear that their constituents, if asked, would recommend that Congress put its mind to more important matters and let the District set its own clocks.

Unification

One of the least recognized and potentially most dangerous flaws of a disunited military establishment is the lack of effective civilian control over military policy. The more compartmentalized the programs and the more dispersed the authority, the more policy is actually determined by military men on the spot. It is to the great credit of the Hoover Commission that it has faced this issue squarely in recommending drastically increased powers for the Secretary of Defense. What the commission is really calling for is a revision of the federation principle which makes the present "unification" machinery merely an expensive superstructure.

A lot of specious reasoning went into the early congressional arguments over the status of the Secretary of Defense. Actually, as the Hoover Commission recognizes, the greatest guarantee of civilian control is a strong Secretary. Whether because of statutory limitations or timidity induced by those limitations, the Secretary is not in a position today to enforce cohesion and continuity. This is abundantly proved, despite recent improvements, by continued budgetary bickering, the lack of liaison between vital agencies and the arguments over strategy that still erupt after basic decisions supposedly have been reached. Such divided responsibility is no responsibility.

The Hoover Commission seeks to give the Secretary of Defense the same authority accorded other department heads. It would afford him complete budgetary and administrative control over the three service departments and would specifically outline in legislation his powers over military plans and policies. Further, it would center in the Secretary responsibility for personnel policy, training and recruiting—part of which already has been accomplished. In return, the report calls for a major overhauling of budgetary and inventory procedures.

The final report goes one step further than the Eberstadt task force study and calls for reducing the present service Secretaries to Undersecretaries for the Army, Navy and Air Force. Despite the objections of four members of the commission, including Mr. Hoover, we feel that this is a wise concession to the necessity for subordinating the individual departments to the over-all national defense. If the three service heads retained their titles, the temptation toward separatism would be strengthened. The thing to be sought is not three services as ends in themselves, but as integrated parts of the larger element of defense. This integration would be aided by another commission recommendation—the creation of an Undersecretary and three Assistant Secretaries of Defense to aid the Secretary with what is now a back-breaking burden.

In one respect we believe the Hoover report temporizes. It would abolish the post of chief of staff to the President, and it calls for the appointment of a chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. But it shies away from the logical corrective for the divided Joint Chiefs in a single Chief of Staff on the armed services. A compelling argument for such an official, to have staff rather than command functions, is made by four dissenting members of the commission. It may be that the mere naming of a chairman will serve to resolve many of the present difficulties, but it seems to us that the impetus for unity that a single Chief of Staff would give deserved more consideration. It is regrettable, furthermore, that the commission did not dwell on the dual function of members of the Joint Chiefs as strategic planners and operating heads of individual services. More integrated thinking would be encouraged, we believe, by confining these officials to broad supervisory responsibility for operations.

South African Gold

South Africa is the largest gold producer in the world and her chief export is gold. Since gold is not only a commodity but also a universally accepted means of international payment convertible into United States dollars at the official rate of $35 per ounce, South Africans are in some respects a fortunate people. But there is a fly in the ointment. For while the prices of other commodities have been advancing by leaps and bounds since the end of the war, the price of gold remains fixed in terms of dollars. As a result some of South Africa's older, high-cost mines are having difficulty in maintaining output at present levels. Labor is being lured away into more profitable industries, and the development of new gold mining areas is impeded.

An obvious remedy for this state of stagnation would be an increase in the price of gold that would stimulate production. South Africa has already taken a tentative step in that direction by offering a small amount of her gold for sale in London for industrial purposes at a slight premium over the official price. There is a strong suspicion that this move marks the opening of a campaign to raise the price of gold above present official rates. The pressure for such an increase has been enhanced by a shift in South Africa's purchasing from sterling to dollar area countries where payments have to be made in dollars or the gold equivalent of dollars. Currently South Africa's gold shipments to the United States exceed her gold production. Owing to her adverse trade balance, which has entailed a heavy drain on the government's exchange reserves, it has become necessary to resort to import controls primarily designed to reduce purchases from dollar areas. Recently, however, Finance Minister Havenga announced a further tightening of import controls, applicable to sterling as well as nonsterling areas to check the alarming drain on sterling balances now close to the disappearing point.

Despite these difficulties, it was a foregone conclusion that the International Monetary Fund would oppose South African plans for selling gold at prices above officially set rates. As expected, it has strongly protested to the Finance Minister, stressing the inadequacy of the safeguards against hoarding of the sold metal for monetary purposes and warning South Africa to make no future deals without first securing the Fund's approval. This action is in line with policies already laid down by the IMF.

Such precautions are necessary. For, as the London Times pointed out in a recent editorial, transactions in gold at prices above the official monetary prices for the metal or big production subsidies that raise gold prices above prescribed levels "indicate a partial devaluation of the currency concerned," while even small transactions of this type "undermine confidence in the stability of currencies." It follows that such operations conflict with obligations assumed by IMF members "to collaborate with the Fund to promote exchange stability, to maintain orderly exchange arrangements with other members, and to avoid competitive exchange alterations."

Concerted efforts on the part of governments to stabilize their currencies in terms of gold are also essential to insure continued reliance on the use of gold as a means of settling international balances. Hence it is to the long-run advantage of all gold-producing countries to refrain from action that tends to impair the usefulness of the IMF, even though it may mean foregoing some immediate gains. South Africa would be short-sighted, indeed, to ignore the IMF warning and risk loss of her membership privileges.

Academic Tyranny

Freedom to teach without dictation from any government, church, political party or interest is certainly one of the basic elements in our democratic society. It is good to have the American Association of University Professors reassert that principle in the Nation's Capital and to undertake investigations into complaints of AAUP members who claim to have been denied academic freedom. Education in this or any other country can serve the highest public interest only if the freest kind of search for the truth is protected and encouraged.

Reports that eight professors have been ousted for supporting Henry Wallace are very disturbing. Another serious question has been raised by the dismissal of a chemistry professor from the Oregon State University for teaching the theories of the Russian Communist Lysenko. In these days of ideological warfare there is grave danger that competent teachers may be dismissed merely because they hold unorthodox views. If we value progress, freedom and human dignity, this tendency must be resisted with the utmost vigilance.

At the same time it is well to remember that the AAUP's emphasis is not upon protecting any Communist professor but upon "freedom." Its resolution declares that teachers must be free to accept or discard the scientific theories which some governments champion. There is no suggestion in its resolution that American universities should continue on their faculties Communist propagandists who are committed to teach the party line. The difficult question is whether a member of the Communist Party must be regarded ipso facto as having a closed mind and consequently as being incompetent to seek or to teach the truth. Possibly there are some cases in which Communist professors have not taken seriously the discipline which party membership imposes upon them. Presumably in these cases no harm would be done by permitting a Communist geologist, musician or mathematician to continue teaching his subject. But it does seem to us that the burden of proof that he is still a free agent rests on the Communist professor. For, the dominant fact about Communist Party membership is the requirement of adhering to Communist doctrine and that doctrine embraces anything that may be enunciated by the Kremlin.

A teacher can be a Democrat, Republican or Socialist without sacrificing one iota of his freedom of thought and action. But the Communist, if he is true to his pledge, accepts the tyranny of the party line. The problem of deciding in each individual case whether a challenged professor has sacrificed his intellectual integrity is extremely difficult. But the American people would be inexcusably gullible if they did not adopt some means of drawing a distinction between those who can be trusted with academic freedom and those who use freedom only to destroy it.

What's His Name

In his Jefferson-Jackson Day address President Truman embellished his attack on the Taft-Hartley Act with a quotation credited to a Republican Senator, who called it "a device for making unions so weak they cannot carry on effective collective bargaining." We wish the President would reveal the name of that Senator, for whoever made such a remark is disqualified by sheer stupidity for responsible office. Presumably the unknown was a firm supporter of the Act. In that case, he should have realized that the best defense of the Act lay in affirmative assertion that it would make for more effective, less one-sided collective bargaining. Even if he secretly doubted the validity of the argument, he should have been sufficiently aware of the state of public opinion to pay lip service to the cause of collective bargaining. Finally, any one who so misjudged the purpose and workability of the Taft-Hartley Act, as shown by subsequent experience of its working, is discredited as a critic even though the President takes satisfaction in citing him as an authority.

"Baby Bonus"

Mr. Arthur W. Erickson's letter of February 22 criticizing Malvina Lindsay's column of February 19 seems to miss the main point of her discussion. He apparently belongs to that school which shows extreme alarm at any measure that might encourage the birth rate, but as Miss Lindsay points out, the system of family allowances in actual practice seems to have had very little effect on the birth rate. It does, however, have a great effect on those children who would have been born anyway.

Shortly after the system was introduced in Canada, for instance, Miss Mae Fleming, chief supervisor of the Welfare Service, noted seven important benefits reaped by the Canadian children: (1) A noticeable improvement in diet of low income families; (2) an increase in the purchases of children's clothes; (3) so many more children were able to attend school or to remain in school longer that in some areas there was a minor crisis in class room space and transportation.

(4) An increase in the demand for medical, dental, and optical services for children with a drop in the requests for such public aid; (5) an increase in the use of recreational facilities and in the purchase of athletic equipment; (6) a greater demand for music lessons and other cultural development; (7) the families with a marginal income showed in many cases an increased sense of security.

I would also like to take issue with Mr. Erickson's objection which implies that large families are unfair to the children because they cannot furnish them adequate care. A number of my friends have six and seven children and I cannot see that any of these children lack "adequate love, companionship and training."

I agree with Mr. Erickson that society should unite to solve some of these problems "according to the best concepts of religion," but contrary to Mr. Erickson some of the world's outstanding religious leaders seem to feel that until wealth is better distributed family allowances are highly desirable. We actually had them on a fairly large scale for the men in the armed services, and a Gallup Poll published in The Washington Post several years ago showed that opinion in this country was fairly evenly divided with a small undecided group that could give either side a majority.

"Power For TVA"

Let us suppose that the United States, being now the owner and operator of a gigantic printing establishment, authorized expenditures for the expansion of that printing establishment to produce and distributed a daily newspaper in the Washington area in the interests of the free and wide dissemination of more accurate and unbiased information to the people at low cost and for the full utilization of existing facilities."

This daily newspaper could be distributed at a fraction of the price of your publication, because the Government publication would pay no interest on its debt, nor dividends to stockholders, nor Federal taxes, and only nominal taxes (if any) to the States. Thus, this publication could compete very well with you and other privately owned newspapers—but, obviously, neither you nor they could compete with it very long.

That would be TVA applied to your business. But your editorial of February 19, "Power for TVA," would indicate that you, if you were to be consistent, would have no objection to such a Government undertaking in the newspaper field; and that you would "encourage . . . [such a] dynamic for a fuller life."

TVA proponents have sold you a bill of goods.

The proposed steam plant for TVA would be another long, irrevocable step toward the nationalization of the electric power industry. Public ownership advocates understand this, though you may not, for they know that the door would open for similar installations at the other numerous Government hydroelectric projects throughout the country.

Avoiding Depression

One of our most important tasks is to avoid the mistakes which led to the depression of 1929. Former President Hoover remarked afterward that "the debacle which terminated another apparently highly prosperous period was largely contributed by a failure of industry to pass its improvement (through labor-saving devices) on to the consumer." It looks somewhat as if industry might commit the same mistake.

No exhortations will persuade the average industrialist to sell at a lower price than he can. Nor will high taxes change the picture. But a discount on taxes depending on the proof of lower average sales price may induce industry to start that reduction of prices which is necessary not only for the farmer and part of industry itself.

Filibuster Fight

So long as the Senate cloture debate revolves around a rule that would still retain the requirements of a two-thirds vote before a filibuster can be curbed, the campaign is a sham.

Organizations interested in the carrying out of the President's Civil Rights program understand that the real issue is whether cloture should be invoked by a majority vote of those voting and that any other procedure would deny to a majority of the Senators their democratic right to regulate the business of the Senate.

Railroad Passes

No other industry in the United States gives so much of its products or services to its officers and employes as do the railroads in giving free passes. Nor is it confined to the railroads' own officers and employes, but the privilege is also extended to the officers and employes of other railroads.

Before the war the Interstate Commerce Commission prepared a report showing that principal railroads would have collected about 75 million dollars in two semiannual periods had the free pass trips in one year paid the current fares. Only a comparatively small part of it was for company business travel, and even that part was largely incurred on foreign railroads and not the home line. Today the above amount would be more than 100 million dollars because of the much higher fares.

If there were complete elimination of the free pass, a lower than public fare could be offered to railroad officers and employes, beginning with one-half the fare to the public for new officers and employes, graded down to about one fourth the full fare for officers and employes serving 20 years or more. Thus when fares to the public were lowered the amount to be paid by officers and employes would be correspondingly lower, so that all would benefit by a reduced fare.

Supreme Court And Tidelands

On February 15 there was an article on page 3 of The Washington Post, the first part of which reads as follows:

"High Court to Hear Tideland Argument"

"The Justice Department yesterday won a preliminary round in its effort to have the Supreme Court determine Federal rights to the submerged oil lands off the coasts of Louisiana and Texas.

"Oral arguments to help decide if it has jurisdiction to entertain the Justice Department suits were ordered by the Supreme Court over objections of both States."

Farther down in the article, it is stated:

"Should the Government win, it could claim royalties from sales of oil obtained by oil companies from offshore wells."

These statements in The Washington Post constitute flagrant and outrageous misrepresentation of the status of the attempt by the Federal Government to sue Louisiana and Texas over the tideland areas. The oral arguments were not granted by the Court "over the objections of both States," but at the specific request of Louisiana and Texas.

Ordinarily, oral argument is not had on motions in the Supreme Court, and the granting of oral argument in these cases at the request of Louisiana and Texas can only be construed as a pronounced setback for the Department of Justice. It is a clear indication that the Supreme Court considers that the question as to whether or not it has jurisdiction over Louisiana and Texas in the tidelands controversy is a very serious, if not doubtful question.

In this great tidelands controversy, which has now shaken the States to their very foundations, the Federal Government is openly seeking the nationalization, without compensation, of all resources within the marginal sea areas. In this serious controversy, the States are entitled, at the very least, to fairness and accuracy in the reports of the press. Certainly, if the press is ever reduced to the low and servile state of being a political instrumentality of the Federal Government, then the rights of the States, and indeed our very dual form of government, will be close to extinction.

Most assuredly you have every right to take any side of any issue you deem proper in your editorial columns and I respect that right. With the privilege of a free press, however, goes the responsibility of news columns free from propaganda and inaccurate or sloppy reporting.

Spotlight On Japan

FAR FROM being cleared up, the mystery surrounding the Japanese spy report grows deeper and darker. It is now in the stage of denials from all hands.

That is not enough. Senator Lister Hill of Alabama and others in Congress who were stirred by this strange document to demand an investigation should follow through. A thorough inquiry by a Senate or a House committee is in order.

Col. George S. Eyster, deputy chief of the Army Public Information Division, has said that release of the report was a "faux pas." In my dictionary, faux pas is defined as "an error, a slip, especially a breach of good breeding."

Most Americans will feel that release of the report was a lot more than that. For the first time, so far as the record shows, a military branch of the Government saw fit to denounce an American citizen as a spy of a foreign power and without any proof to support the charge.

In Tokyo, Maj. Gen. Charles Willoughby, chief United States intelligence officer in the Far East, has admitted full responsibility for the "secret" report but has denied releasing it or even suggesting that it be released. Quite properly, he points out that it was a secret intelligence report intended for military personnel.

EVEN considered in this light, however, there are curious features of the document, which is based for the most part on the statements of convicted Soviet spies as related in Tokyo police files. In the first place the report, contrary to accepted intelligence practice, editorializes about high Government policy in China, implying that United States policy-makers were duped. The report also contains the kind of flashy touches one would expect in the script of a B movie.

In any thorough inquiry, more should be known about General Willoughby, who has had a distinguished career in the Army. He came from Germany at the age of 18, the son of Baron T. von Tscheppe-Weidenbach and an American mother, Emmy Willoughby, and enlisted in the Regular Army. In 1918 he had his name legally changed to Willoughby. He has written several authoritative books used as texts by the Army at various training levels.

An investigation broadened to cover occupation policy in Japan would be extremely useful at this time. Most people, including many officials here in Washington, are not at all clear as to how Japanese policy is made. Is it made by General MacArthur personally? By the Army? By the State Department?

In the last Japanese election the Communists tripled their strength, the reactionary Right Wing party gained a majority and the middle parties, considered the hope of democratic government in Japan, lost heavily. MacArthur hailed this outcome as a triumph for conservatism.

FEW figures in American life have ever been as complex, as puzzling, as remote from the ordinary currents of debate and controversy as the general who rules over 80,000,000 Japanese. He has been accused of setting up a satrapy and fixing his own policy which today, it is charged, aims at creating in Japan a base for making war on Russian communism.

MacArthur's admirers are fervent to the point of idolatry, taking his purple prose as gospel. In his fair and careful book, MacArthur's Japan, Russell Brines of the Associated Press tells how the general's aides in Japan try to shelter him from unpleasant news. The picture is of a man living in a world pretty well removed from the clashes and conflicts of actuality both in Japan and this country.

The general has not visited the continental United States since 1937. That is a very long time in terms of what has happened. If MacArthur is critical of United States policy in the Far East, as has been reported, then it is important to get his views on the record.

At the same time the United States position in Korea should be appraised. Many persons with experience there feel that the token force in Korea is a waste of scarce military manpower for no useful end.

For too long, Japan and the Far East have been taken for granted. This is not fair to General MacArthur, who may well feel that circumstances and the default of other authority have forced him to become a kind of uncrowned emperor.

A propaganda campaign has now begun for more troops for Japan. If they are necessary, let's have the facts from the proper sources. A good long look at what is happening in Japan, and particularly in relation to the tragedy of China, is way overdue.

"Future Of Alcoholism"

Malvina Lindsay's article of February 17 on "The Future of Alcoholism" was a splendid discussion of the inevitable problem. I was horrified to read that alcoholism has become the No. 4 disease in the United States.

A good method of decreasing drunkenness might be to expose some of the startling facts about this matter to the public. If the American public would only realize what a dastardly disease this is and will continue to be until this menace is conquered, it would undoubtedly begin to prepare for the problem.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Wednesday Truman

IN THE struggle which President Truman has chosen to precipitate in the Eighty-first Congress much more is at stake than whether all his campaign promises can be carried out right away. There is at stake the power of the Government to manage the recession in business.

LIPPMANN

There is a very considerable risk that in his effort to break down the opposition and obstruction to his legislative program, he will lose control—to all kinds of pressure groups and special interests—over the very delicate and difficult business of deciding how far to permit the disinflation to run and when to intervene so as to prevent a severe depression.

THE PRESENT recession would almost certainly have come sooner and have been less severe had the Eightieth Congress not insisted on reducing taxes before election. For if the higher taxes had been retained, the inflation would have been checked sooner—the rise in prices would not have been so great and the decline would not now have to be so big, and so costly to those who must liquidate. If the tax reduction had not been applied when the boom was booming, it could now be applied in order to moderate the recession.

This illustrates the problem: it shows how in the Eightieth Congress, which the President could not control, an opportunity was lost to manage the economy. The Congress insisted on more inflation at a time when the best interests of the country called for a moderate and relatively painless policy of disinflation.

NOW AT the present time the disinflation, which was postponed, is taking place. There are unmistakable signs that the people cannot or will not buy all the goods produced at the higher prices, and that therefore prices must fall if demand and supply are to come into balance again. This is the "healthy readjustment" that everyone is talking about. Obviously it needs very careful watching. For while prices ought still to come down, they ought not to be pushed down suddenly and brutally, as they would be by raising taxes now or by imposing additional restrictions on credit.

The main need is, therefore, to wait, but fully alerted—not to aggravate the disinflation and yet not to arrest it too soon—and to be ready to act when prices are in better balance but before unemployment has become larger than is unavoidable in the liquidation that is inevitable. That point would probably be reached when the cost of living had come down say 10 per cent and unemployment was approaching say 7 per cent. Exactness and perfect certainty in matters of this kind are impossible. But statesmen have to have some practical working rule, and these figures are in the judgment of those I think best qualified to judge a reasonable measure.

THE SUCCESS of such a policy would obviously be gravely jeopardized if Congress gets out of control. That this is just what may happen is illustrated by Congressman Rankin's bill to provide pensions for the veterans of all our wars, and for their widows as well.

The significance of this measure can only be appreciated in the light of the decision of the Truman Democrats to amend the rules of the House and of the Senate in order to remove the obstruction to the Truman program. Because they do not want to be obstructed by the Rules Committee in the House and by filibusters in the Senate, they have struck down the Rules Committee and they are attacking the filibuster. Their object, of course, is to make it possible for the Democratic majority to carry out the Truman legislative program.

BUT RANKIN'S bill is a shrewd and malign maneuver, designed not merely to buy the votes of veterans but to demonstrate that if the power to obstruct is removed, it will not necessarily be only the Truman Democrats who will have their way. The first beneficiaries of the new legislative freedom are to be not the Truman Democrats but the Rankin demagogues.

Now the Rankin bill, immoral as it is, will not in itself affect, except psychologically, the immediate condition of the American economy. For though the ultimate cost might be 200 billions, the initial cost is only 62 millions. But as a precedent for other legislation designed to buy votes it is an immediate peril to the whole policy of managing the recession. For if a bill of this kind can be forced out of committee and into Congress, then other bills can also be forced out—bills to inflate before the readjustment has taken place, bills to build up another boom, and therefore to bring about in the end a truly unmanageable depression and collapse.

FOR MR. TRUMAN, and his Administration and for the country, the real question is whether the fulfillment of his campaign pledges must mean the loss of his power to steer the country through a moderate recession, away from a prolongation of the big boom and its inevitable consequence, a big bust. That is what is at stake in his decision to fight Congress rather than to persuade and to lead it. That is why his post-election mood, that of the infallible Wednesday Truman, is not one to bring confidence and unity to the Nation.

Right to Quiz Witness Held Constitutional

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—The Maryland Constitution guarantees the right of the defendant to question State witnesses even in a preliminary hearing, Attorney General Hall Hammond ruled today.

The opinion was given on the request of Senator George W. Della (D., Baltimore), chairman of the Senate Judicial Proceedings Committee.

Prince Georges County trial magistrates have been refusing to grant the right to question witnesses unless the defendant took the stand or revealed substantially his defense, according to charges made to the committee. The trial magistrates at the time admitted the practice. A bill has been introduced by Delegate William H. McGrath (D., Prince Georges) to stop the practice.

"It is our conclusion," ruled the Attorney General, "that the cross-examination of State's witnesses at a preliminary is not a mere privilege which may be granted or withheld at the option of the magistrate or the prosecutor, but rather that it is a fundamental right, the exercise of which may not be surrounded with conditions or made subject to the election of the accused to testify in his own behalf.

"One cannot be required to barter away his constitutional right against self-incrimination in return for an equally fundamental constitutional right, that of cross-examination. For the reason we have given, it is our opinion that what House Bill 133 undertakes to provide is already a part of the organic Law of Maryland, and that the bill would add nothing to the rights of an accused."

Telescope 'Sees' A Billion Light Years Into Sky

Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 28 (AP).—The 200-inch "giant eye" telescope at Palomar Mountain has reached out one billion light years into space in test work, California Institure of Technology announced today.

One light year is approximately six trillion miles.

Astronomers who have been studying the test "shots" for several weeks said the telescope photographed nebuli a billion light years away. That is twice as far as the best work ever accomplished with the 100-inch telescope at Mount Wilson Observatory.

A range of one billion light years was the maximum for which the Palomar instrument was designed, and Dr. Ira S. Bowen, director of both Mount Wilson and Palomar, pronounced the tests successful, despite the fact the "giant eye" mirror is not yet perfect.

Town Charter Changes Asked By Greenbelt

By Phillip J. Austensen

Post Reporter

Annapolis, Feb. 28—Proposed changes in the Greenbelt town charter were presented to Prince Georges County legislators here tonight by town officials.

The proposals were presented durnig a dinner at Carvel Hall, attended by the legislators and town officials.

The proposals would change the town's official designation to "City of Greenbelt" and change its boundary line to remove from the town approximately 200 acres which are privately owned or part of the Department of Agriculture farm.

Election rules would be changed to provide that voters must register at least 30 days before election; that election appeals may be taken to the clerk of the County Circuit Court instead of the town clerk; that electioneering within 100 feet of polling places be prohibited; and that notices of elections and voting lists be posted in any public place, such as the post-office or town council room. Now such notices are restricted to the community hall.

Provision for a committee of three disinterested citizens to review dismissals by the town manager of town employes also was included among the proposals, and under another, the town solicitor would be required to attend meetings of the council only when requested to do so by the town manager.

Under another proposal, provisions for taxation of rural property would be deleted, since this property is being removed from the town.

Two DC-6s Land Safely as Cabins Fill With Smoke

Wildwood, N. J., Feb. 28 (AP).—Two American Airlines DC-6 planes made emergency landings today when their cabins filled with smoke while flying over New Jersey.

One plane carrying 20 passengers from Washington to New York landed at Wildwood airport. The other, bound from Mexico City to New York with 48 passengers and a crew of five, landed a few hours earlier at Philadelphia International Airport about 70 miles away.

Capt. Edward D. Swanson, pilot of the Washington-New York plane, said electrical trouble caused smoke to drift into the cabin. He said he was unable to land at Newark or New York because of snow and poor visibility.

The pilot of the Mexico City-New York plane, Capt. Sam R. Ross, of Sarasota, Fla., said an oil leak in the ventilating system caused the smoke. Similar adverse weather conditions prevented landing at New York.

Bill Exempts Clubs in Tax Payments

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—The Maryland Senate decreed tonight that Maryland fraternal organizations and women's clubs should not pay property taxes.

Before passing the House-approved tax exemption bill, the Senate made a change in the wording to qualify only noncommercial organizations.

The measure, sent in by the Legislative Council, resulted from an Allegany County dispute. The State Tax Commission ordered clubs there to pay the property levy last year, and an appeal is still pending in the Circuit Court.

Allegany tax authorities asserted at a committee hearing last month that without revenue from fraternal organizations, the county tax rate would jump 2 or 3 cents.

But the bill's preamble declares the State never intended that property of nonprofit, fraternal groups be taxed.

Delegate Mary L. Nock (D., Wicomico), one of three women in the House of Delegates, had the bill amended in committee to take in women's clubs.

Washington area organizations already had been threatened with tax bills.

The House must concur in the Senate's tightening amendment before the measure goes to Governor Lane for final action.

2 Colleges Ask Lane For Building Funds

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—Rooters for two old colleges in the southern and western extremes of Maryland asked Governor Lane today to give them more building money.

Delegations supporting St. Mary's Female Seminary in St. Marys City, capital of provincial Maryland, and Frostburg State Teachers College in Western Maryland appealed for funds in the administration's capital improvement program.

They met with the Governor as senators and delegates returned to the State House to open the ninth week of the current General Assembly session.

How much money to appropriate for capital expenses was one of the major questions confronting the Legislature.

The governor has proposed $5,850,000 be spent on improvements at the State's tuberculosis sanitoria and 20 million dollars for mental hospitals, which would exhaust the State treasury surplus earmarked for capital improvements. Nothing would be left for other institutions, including the colleges.

Camp Report Read at Trial Of Officer

Fort Meade, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—An investigating officer's report on a disciplinary barracks for American soldiers in Germany was read into evidence today against Col. Harold H. McClune of San Antonio, Tex.

Colonel McClune, who retired in 1947 after 30 years of Army service, was commanding officer of the Wurzburg Disciplinary Barracks earlier that year.

He is charged with negelecting and mistreating prisoners. Three other officers have been acquitted of similar accusations.

General court-martial charges were filed against the four men after an investigation by Col. Frederick Pitts last summer. There were complaints that soldiers at the disciplinary camp suffered for lack of clothing and heat in the bitter cold January of 1947.

One of the witnesses is Pvt. Joseph Suggs, a soldier from Arkansas, whose feet were frostbitten at Wurzburg. They were amputated later, and he is still a patient at the Army's Walter Reed Hospital in Washington.

Colonel Pitts' official report was read to the court of two brigadier generals and five colonels trying Colonel McClune. Then the investigator was questioned directly.

Group Backs Building Plan For Schools

A year-long study of Prince Georges County school needs by the League of Women Voters has resulted in full indorsement of the school board's long-range construction program, it was disclosed yesterday.

Officials of the league said the study results, compiled by a special committee,, would be presented formally to the school board at its regular meeting today at 10 a. m. at Upper Marlboro. A copy also will be presented to Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., at Annapolis on Thursday.

Besides indorsing the school board's construction program, which proposes expenditures of about 10 million dollars for new schools and additions, the report calls for:

1. Renewed efforts to obtain funds for the building program through legislation that would quadruple the State incentive fund and provide further State grants for local school construction.

2. A thorough study of curricula in advance of construction so that new buildings can be designed to offer programs conforming to the curruriculum.

3. Development of procedures for setting aside land for school sites whenever approval is granted for large-scale real estate developments.

4. Inclusion of kindergarten in the school program, with provisions for kindergarten classrooms in all new elementary schools.

5. Accreditation of high schools by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

6. Exploration of the need for a junior college in the county.

U.N. Atomic Commission Urged To Detail World Program

The United Nations Atomic Energy Commission should detail its full program despite opposition, the Federation of American Scientists recommended here yesterday.

By such elaboration, said the federation statement, the commission can meet the Soviet charge that insistence on point-by-point accord "stems from a desire to prolong the American advantage in the atomic field."

The statement, released by Dr. Arthur Roberts, physicist, State University of Iowa, and chairman of the federation's administrative committee, proposed a four-point program to speed up the reactivivated commission's work. These included:

1. Detailing of an organization of an international authority, including the financial and administrative operations.

2. Setting up quotas for such atomic facilities as nuclear reactors, processing plants and radioactive isotope production.

3. Detailing stages leading from the present situation to full international control, developing a system which precludes any special advantage to any nation.

4. Outlining sanctions which would be used by the international authority for dealing with violations of its rules.

Dr. Roberts pointed out that each nation now setting up its own system for atomic energy development could be better guided toward future international controls if more complete proposals are made available.

"We realize that it may not be possible to make any detailed suggestions for transition stages before there is agreement on the general principles of control," the statement said. "But it does seem to us possible and important to discuss the philosophy of stages, to make it clear that no participating nation should obtain special advantage."

Truman Hears Lecture At Army War College

President Truman paid a surprise visit to the Army War College yesterday to listen to a lecture on "The Political Strategy of the Axis in World War II."

The lecture was given by Dr. Raymond J. Sontag, chief of the State Department's German war documents project and former professor at the University of California.

The White House said that President Truman was "interested in the work the Army War College is doing."

Time-Honored N. & W. Stock Off the Board

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Washington Stock Exchange reluctantly took action yesterday to suspend trading in one of its most time-honored issues—common stock of Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co.

Informed that the 5000 shares of $100 par stock is no longer freely transferable, the exchange's governing committee asked the Securities and Exchange Commission for permission to delist the issue. The stock will not be quoted on the local market, starting today.

N. & W. stock has been listed on the local exchange for more than half a century. Last bid price was $215 a share. Inactive in recent years, only 40 shares changed hands last year with the low being $157 and high $171.

The company, incorporated in Virginia in 1890, is now in the process of liquidation. Stockholders voted December 29 to terminate the line after the company's only steamer, the District of Columbia, was disabled October 31. Crippling of the ship, following a collision, ended alternate nightly trips between Washington and Norfolk.

Clarence F. Norment, president of N. & W., recently listed assets as including the damaged steamer, piers in Norfolk and Alexandria and an office building here.

Latest available financial statement listed cash at $77,316 and $907,097 invested in Government securities.

MERGER TREND: The prospective consolidation of National Bank of Washington with National Metropolitan Bank will mark the fourth such merger here in recent years. Bank of Washington stockholders will vote on the proposed combine on March 16. Previously, Citizens Bank was merged into Union Trust Co., Columbia National Bank into American Security & Trust Co., and East Washington Savings Bank into National Capital Bank. If the latest consolidation goes through (little opposition is expected), it will leave Washington with 18 banks.

NASD ELECTS: C. Fenton Cramer of the Washington investment house of Ferris & Co. has been elected a member of the District committee of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., for a three-year term. He succeeds William W. Mackall of Mackall & Coe, whose term expired. Another new member of the District committee is John C. Hagen, Jr., of Richmond.

CLEARINGS SPURT: Washington bank clearings soared 13 per cent in February over the same 1948 period, more than wiping out a decline in January. Last month's check turnover totaled $283,991,625, against $251,136,399 in the like period last year. For the first two months, clearings aggregated $580,637,791, against $551,186,966 in the corresponding 1948 period.

INSURANCE: John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. reports new insurance placed in force during 1948 amounted to $1,324,806,459, bringing the total to $9,893,598,09f at yearend. Assets rose 10.5 per cent to $2,464,642,100 . . . Atlantic Life Insurance Co. of Richmond, Va., reports new insurance last year totaled $24,367,292, a gain of 11 per cent. Total assets were $53,261,353 at yearend.

REFUNDING: The Treasury announced it will pay off in cash today 400 million dollars in one-year certificate of indebtedness held by the Federal Reserve System. The money is part of a $3,553,156,000 issue of 1¼ per cent certificates maturing March 1. Besides the Reserve System, holders of another $232,213,000 of the maturing certificates will be paid off in cash. The remaining $2,920,943,000 in maturing certificates will be exchanged for new one-year notes bearing 1¼ per cent interest.

EARNINGS: Radio Corporation of America reported net income of $24,022,047 or $1.50 a common share for 1948, compared with $18,769,557 or $1.12 a share for 1947. Other earnings reports:

Union Carbide In Year Nets 102 Million

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Union Carbide & Carbon Corp. reported today 1948 income of $102,335,053 on a sales volume of $631,619,557, which was the largest in the company's history.

The income was equal to $3.55 a share on 28,807,314 shares of capital stock outstanding after a 3-for-1 split in April, 1948.

It compared with $75,666,792 or $2.62 a share, figured on the same number of shares, in 1947.

Expenditures for construction of additional production facilities amounted to $114,857,493 in 1948 against $104,235,456 in the preceding year. Principal expenditures were in the chemicals and plastics divisions.

Westinghouse Electric Co. had a 1948 net income of $55,656,351, or $3.88 a share, after a contingent inventory reserve of three million dollars. This compared with a 1947 net income of $56,907,417, or $3.58 a share, after a contingent inventory reserve of $8,101,000. Gwilym A. Price, president, said Westinghouse manufactured and shipped an all-time record total of $970,673,847 of electrical products during the year, an increase of $149,420,098 over 1947.

American Tobacco Co., manufacturers of Lucky Strikes and other cigarettes and tobacco products, reported net income for 1948 was $43,912,204, equal to $7.58 a share of common stock. Net income in 1947 was $33,217,491, equal to $5.70 a common share. Net sales totaled $873,466,917 last year, against $819,631,122 in 1947.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—Grains overcame a little early timidity today and ended with a fair show of strength. Both wheat and corn had gains running to more than a cent, while soybeans jumped as much as 2¼ cents.

Buying wheat followed news the Commodity Credit Corporation had purchased more than seven million bushels of cash grain last weekend, largest for a two-day period since before the price drop earlier this month.

Corn was aided by a continued good demand for the cash grain, as well as by low temperatures accompanied by moderate winds in most of the Midwest. This weather might dry out some corn which otherwise would be moved to market before April 1, traders said.

Grain men pointed out that corn with 20½ per cent moisture can now be placed under the Government loan, but beginning April 1 it will have to hold only 17½ per cent moisture or less. Cold weather could dry out some grain and make it available for the loan, traders said.

Wheat closed ⅝-1⅝ higher; corn was ½ lower to 1⅛ higher; oats were unchanged to ⅝ higher; rye was 2¾-3½ higher; soybeans were ¼-2¼ higher, and lard was 7 to 27 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Sales Tax Assailed by R. L. Arnold

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—Remmie L. Arnold, Petersburg manufacturer and Democratic gubernatorial candidate, today criticized the State's pay-as-you-go policy of financing public improvements. He opposed the principle of the sales tax.

Arnold, addressing the Richmond Optimist Club on "Taxation in Virginia," said:

"Is it sound business to charge up to future years that part of expenditures applicable to capital outlay which will serve those of tomorrow as well as those of today?

"It appears to me that it is unjust economy to cause our present generation to bear the burden of the future while we neglect to give our citizens today some of the services which are so badly needed and at least part of which, if not all, can be financed under our present tax structure if we are willing to be fair and apply sound business principles."

On the sales tax, he said:

"In my opinion it is one of the worst forms of taxation and should be kept in its proper place as a tax of last resort when all other means have failed."

$198,167.50 Check Gives GW Full Title to New Hospital

George Washington University yesterday gained full title to its five-million-dollar 400-bed teaching hospital at Washington Circle by handing over a $198,167.50 check to the Federal Works Agency.

The check was tendered FWA Administrator Philip B. Fleming by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, in the FWA office.

The amount represented the difference between a $350,000 lease price paid when the hospital was opened last March 23 and the appraised value of the property housing the old hospital and medical school at 1335-39 H st. nw. Under original terms of the hospital project, the market price of the H st. property in excess of the $350,000 was to be paid into the United States Treasury.

The old property holds a sentimental value to the alumni, staff and trustees of the university, Dr. Marvin said. It is now used for cancer research.

Court Dismisses Rape Charge Against Man, 30

A rape charge against Orlando Alston, 30, of 1141 Abbey pl. ne., was dismissed yesterday in District Court. Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin told Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut that the complaining witness admitted she was partly at fault and declined to prosecute, saying she was soon to get married and was afraid of publicity.

See you again— 300 miles from now!

Gallon for gallon, this 130-HP Packard Eight is miles ahead of its field! Come in—see why!
Want to check our figures?
Start with 17 (the capacity of this Packard gas tank). Multiply by 18 (the highway-mileage figure most frequently mentioned by new Packard owners in a national survey*).
Answer: 306 highway miles!
Over 300 miles to a filling—and all the way, you're marveling at the soothing smoothness . . . and the safety-sprint responsiveness . . . of a 130-horsepower straight-eight engine!
That's how Packard "free-breathing" engine design is writing the thrift story of the fine car field. "Free-breathing" engine design—born of Packard's wartime experience powering all the PT boats, and America's fastest planes. Browns Toss Cardinals Out of Sportsman's Park

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 28.—Sam Dente checked into the Washington training camp today. Manager Joe Kuhel surveyed him closely. Kuhel's interest stems from the fact that Dente is supposed to play a lot of shortstop for the Nats this season. He saw a well-knit 170-pounder, a bit on the small side and slightly hard of hearing on the left side.

POVICH

That latter bit of data about Dente is more understandable when it is remembered that he was an antiaircraft gunner for a spell in the last international conflict. The better to set the dials for the ack-ack his gun group sent up, he was forever bending close to the rackety-rack of his 40-millimeter piece, and the ear went bad on him.

Kuhel, however, is philosophical about Dente's deafness. He doesn't field a ground ball with his ears, does he?" the Nats' manager inquired pertinently. "As long as there's nothing wrong with his arms and legs, we're willing to string along with him."

When the Army's greater need was for tank men, Dente was transferred out of antiaircraft gunnery to the 106th Tank Battalion, and went far. All the way into Germany, and was ready to go to Berlin until it was decided it would be nice to let the Russians in first.

ON THE WASHINGTON CLUB, Dente will join up again with his old pal, Al Kozar. They were some shucks as the shortstop-second base combination at Scranton in 1946 when they were both the property of the Red Sox. The Nats scouted the pair that far back, and one of the reasons for obtaining Dente from the Browns last December was to team him again with Kozar.

Dente beat Kozar into the big leagues by a year. He came up through the Boston system at Owensboro, Greensboro, Scranton and Louisville, and when he couldn't break into the Red Sox infield they traded him to the Browns. He wound up as their regular shortstop last season, and that was something of a triumph.

When Dente was sent to St. Louis by the Red Sox, Pellagrini was retained as the Boston utility man. With the purchase of Vern Stephens by Boston, Pellagrini, too, was sent to the Browns. At St. Louis last season, Dente beat out Pellagrini for the regular shortstop job, thus gaining some vindication for himself.

DENTE'S .259 batting average with the Browns may not be impressive at first glance, but with the Washington club he needs no apologies for that figure. No other member of the Nats' infield boasted as high an average last season, and Dente says, "I'm better than a .259 hitter."

Kuhel will settle for a .260 batting average from Dente, though, if the fellow plays shortstop for the Nats like he saw him play for the Browns. "We missed so many double plays last year because of Johnny Sullivan's erratic job and Mark Christman's slowness, it was brutal," says Kuhel. "I know Dente can step up our double play production a lot."

The Nats' infield situation for 1949 reveals a complete turnover within two years. Not a member of the 1947 infield is now with the club. Mickey Vernon is in Cleveland, Gerry Priddy is with the Browns, and Cecil Travis has retired from the active list.

KOZAR AT second base and Eddie Yost at third were thoroughly acceptable defensively last year, even on the brilliant side, but there was a deal of fault-finding at both first base, where Mickey Vernon held forth, and at shortstop, where first Sullivan and later Christman essayed the job.

There was griping among the Washington pitchers not only because of their failure to get many runs to work with, but for the leaks at first and shortstop. Vernon, they felt, was an overrated first baseman, a good target but weak on ground balls, especially the hard-hit grounders, and he was reluctant on bunts.

At shortstop, Christman was the lesser of the evils. He was steadier than the erratic Sullivan, but he covered less ground. He got all balls hit at him, which was nice, but he was slow on the double play. Kuhel expects Dente to go farther, come up with more ground balls, and get them away nimbly enough to initiate a lot more double plays.

Legal Fight Flares Over Demand for Higher Rent

St. Louis, Feb. 28 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinal baseball club was notified today that, effective April 1, it could no longer use Sportsman's Park.

The notice was served by the Dodier Realty & Investment Co., which owns the park and which is controlled by the St. Louis Browns.

A feud between the city's two major league clubs over use of the park has been smoldering for some time. The Browns have demanded a higher rental fee than the $35,000 the Cardinals are paying annually.

And the American League club management has been irritated by the refusal of the Cardinals to stop radio broadcasts of their road games. This, the American club has maintained, cuts the attendance at Browns' home games.

Legal Notice in Newspaper

Today's action came in the form of a legal notice inserted in the Globe-Democrat. It notified the National League club that it had forfeited its park lease "because of an attempted assignment," and declared the contract terminated.

Attorneys pointed out that the organization which in 1947 bought the Cardinal club from Sam Breadon and headed by Robert E. Hannegan and Fred M. Saigh, jr., was incorporated as National Sports, Inc. Hannegan since has sold his interests to Saigh and National Sports, Inc., has become St. Louis National Baseball Club, Inc.

The Browns claim that the change in corporate names, which was made without consent of the Browns, nullifies the lease which has two more years to run. The lease was signed 12 years ago.

George Simpkins, attorney and secretary of the Cardinals, said the change in corporate names resulted basically from a merger of two corporations and that under Missouri law a merged corporation succeeds to all the rights of the prior corporation. He commented that the Browns apparently "are seizing on a legal principle that doesn't exist."

William O. DeWitt, president of the Browns, declared the notice was "self-explanatory" and refused comment.

Have to Act Quickly

The Browns have sought to negotiate a new rental contract, the terms of which, according to Saigh's organization, would cost the Cardinals about $150,000 a year. The Browns maintain the amount would not exceed $90,000.

The latest move apparently will result in a protracted court battle, with the Cardinals in a postition where they must act quickly to insure themselves of a site on which to play home games during the 1949 season which opens here April 22.

The National League team has used Sportsman's Park as a "tenant' of the Browns since 1920. Before that they had a park of their own.

Several seasons ago Breadon, then owner of the Cardinals, purchased a site for a new 50,000-seat park on the South Side, but the project was dropped because of high construction costs. At present Sportsman's Park is the only diamond here suitable for major league play.

Tampa Baseball Training Capital

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Sixteen major league managers in various resort paradises sounded the annual roll call of their baseball players today and with customary spring optimism said things were going to be very fine this year.

Tomorrow they officially open spring training and there wasn't one among them who seemed the least bit glum. Not all—in fact very few of them—made any pennant predictions, but their general tone was that with the right kind of breaks during the season, their boys might be battling in the World Series come October.

This bustling cigar town hard by the Florida Gulf Coast was the capital city of spring training.

17 Pitchers, Three Catchers on Hand

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28—The mild holdout of Ray Scarborough, top pitcher on the Washington club, ended today when he affixed his name to a 1949 contract calling for a salary estimated at $16,000.

Scarborough was one of the four players with whom Owner Clark Griffith talked contract today, and the only one who was not subjected to a salary cut. The others, Pitchers Walt Masterson and Mickey Haefner, and Catcher Al Evans, were expected to sign a reduction in pay before tomorrow's first workout of the spring training season.

The fact that Masterson, Haefner and Evans are on the training scene is tantamount to their acceptance of Griffith's highest offer. They would be risking fines and suspension if they were not under contract by 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Griffith's holdout troubles are thus disappearing almost completely. The only other unsigned player is utility man Mark Christman, who is not due to report until March 5, and is not considered a holdout until he fails to accept terms by that deadline.

Veeck Hands Yank Squabble To Chandler

By Leo H. Petersen

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Cleveland President Bill Veeck was forced to postpone his plans to air out the Indian-New York Yankee rookie signing feud with Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler today because of bad flying weather.

The Yankees have charged Cleveland with being "unethical" in signing one rookie, and the Indians in turn accused the Yanks of signing another player already under option to them.

Veeck arranged an appointment with Chandler today to discuss the twin sore points, but he wired from Cleveland that his plane could not take off because of the weather.

Chandler said Veeck promised to arrange another appointment soon, but that there was "no indication" when the meeting will be held.

Actually, the meeting is not a formal hearing. "Officially, I don't know what Mr. Veeck wants to see me about," Chandler said. "I presume it's on the Yankee matter, and after I see him I will see General Manager George Weiss of the Yankees at St. Petersburg."

The Yankee and Indian heads have been feuding since the Indians signed Negro Shortstop Artie Wilson, who performed with the Birmingham, Ala., Black Barons in the Negro National League.

Weiss said Wilson agreed orally to a Yankee contract before Veeck signed him. Veeck in turn protested the Yankee signing of Luis Marquez, Negro outfielder of the Washington, D. C., Homestead Grays. Veeck said the Indians had a 120-day option on Marquez and that he was "sure" Chandler would uphold the Indians' right to the player.

Chandler said today that he may not have jurisdiction over the signings since the Negro leagues are not part of organized baseball.

Post Bowling Benefit Ends With Heavy Action Tonight

The third annual Washington Post Bowling Tournament for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club and nearby county boys' recreational activities will come to a grand climax tonight.

Since Monday, February 14, the tournament, held in cooperation with the Metropolitan Washington Duckpin Operators Association, has been claiming the interest of more than 10,000 participants on 27 alleys in this area.

Following tonight's competition, all operators will turn over the remainder of their scores to Julie Singer, manager of Greenway alleys, who is serving as chairman of the scoring committee.

Singer and Hap Newman, co-chairmen of the big event, will confer with other members of their committee to decide on the list of prizes to be given the huge field of bowlers.

The Post emphasizes the importance of alley owners and managers exercising as much speed as possible in delivering the complete list of entries to Singer at Greenway. Tabulations will be made as soon as all alleys have reported.

Many of the alleys have doubled last year's action.

This is true in the cases of Penn, where Lou Kramer by tonight expects to soar over the 1000 mark; Bethesda Bowling Center, where Fred Murphy, Pat Troiana and associates have been doing a tremendous job with the aid of the Women's Auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club; Hi-Skor, where Manager Eddie Winslow is gearing his floor men for the final push tonight, and at Kalorama, where the field has soared past the 500 mark.

The scoring at all alleys has been generally outstanding, and there is a strong possibility that before the firing ends tonight a new record for the tournament will be set, both for the men and women.

Scratch for men is 128 and for women 118. Entry fee is 50 cents—lowest in local history. One-half of this goes to the Police Boys' Club, the other half to the bowling prize fund.

If you haven't entered The Post tournament, do so today and tonight. It's your last opportunity.

Even if you have entered previously, you have another chance tonight. There will tbe some $2000 in prize money awaiting the field of participants.

Mason-Dixon Tourney Opens

All the basketball any fan could desire will be available tonight at the Catholic University gym as the first round of the annual Mason-Dixon Conference tournament starts at 5:30 p. m.

Four games, bringing all eight contenders into actoin, are scheduled for the first night, starting with a contest between Hampden-Sydney and Mount St. Mary's.

The host Catholic U. five takes the floor in the second game, meeting Bridgewater, and in the night's feature at 8:40, it will be American U. against Western Maryland. The finale sends Loyola, hot tourney favorite, against Roanoke.

In all of tonight's games except the Loyola clash, the outcome is considered a toss up. Even the host club, CU, which backed into the tournament on the strength of a Loyola triumph over Washington College, is rated a good chance.

For American University, tonight's outing will be a rubber match with the Green Terrors, winners of a two-point game over the Eagles after dropping an 18-point decision earlier in the year.

Tonight's Schedule

5:30—Hampden-Sydney (12-0) vs. Mount St. Mary's (8-4).

7:05—Catholic U. (8-9) vs. Bridgewater (10-3).

8:40—American U. (11-3) vs. Western Maryland (8-8).

Ez Charles Beats Maxim In ToughScrap

Cincinnati, Feb. 28 (AP).—Ezzard Charles of Cincinnati finished strongly tonight to win a 15-round boxing decision over Joey Maxim of Cleveland in a bruising battle before 14,062 fans in the Cincinnati Garden. Charles weighed 181¾ and Maxim 184.

Sam and Ben Becker, who promoted the scrap, already have offered Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis $400,000 to meet the winner.

Two of the judges ruled in favor of Charles and the third called it even. Judge Charles Conver had it 70 points for each fighter. Judge George Behle had 73 points for Charles and 69 for Maxim. Judge Joe Blink had it 70 for Charles and 65 for Maxim.

The Associated Press scorecard showed eight rounds for Charles with five for Maxim and two even.

Even in winning, Charles didn't show much to enhance his standing as a contender for Louis' crown.

Maxim's jabs and hooks had Charles completely baffled during the middle part of the fight. He brought blood from Charles nose and kept the Cincinnati Negro off balance most of the time.

Charles started fast and finished fast.

He cut Maxim's left eye in the thirteenth and then hurt the Clevelander with a flock of rights and lefts to the jaw as they moved in close. Maxim rallied to stay even in the fourteenth but Ezzard was the aggressor in the final round.

When it was all over Maxim said he had "coasted" through the last three rounds on instructions from his corner because they felt he was well ahead.

Jack Kearns, his manager, said "I don't think you could drag Charles back into the ring with him."

Caps Defeat Stags, 67-57, Clinch Title

Chicago, Feb. 28.—The Washington Caps clinched the Eastern Division title in the Basketball Association of America by defeating the Chicago Stags before 20,046 fans in Chicago Stadium tonight, 67-57.

The Capitols were behind only twice during the game, at 27-25 and at 45-44 and the score was deadlocked six times. The result snapped the Stags' four game winning streak.

Chicago's Max Zaslofsky paced the scorers with 20 points on seven field goals and six free throws.

Twice in the opening period the Chicagoans were behind by only a single point but they trailed, 16-12, as the quarter ended.

With Zaslofsky leading the attack, the Stags finally drew even at 25-25, and his basket then put them in front for the first time, 27-25.

The half ended with things tied at 30 all.

Washington recaptured the edge opening the third period on Feerick's free throw and held it until Mikan's tap caused a 40-40 deadlock.

McKinney dropped in a free throw for the Caps a little later only to have Mikan hit on a long toss to give the Stags a 45-44 edge entering the final quarter.

Feerick's close-in pitch made it 46-45 for the Caps and from then on they were never tied or in arrears.

Giants, T. of C. Close to Terms On Polo Grounds

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—A spokesman for the Tournament of Champions said today the fight promotion outfit was preparing to close a deal with the New York Giants for use of the Polo Grounds for outdoor boxing shows this summer.

Edgar Feeley, treasurer of the Giants, confirmed the statement. He said the Giants presently have no agreement with either the New York Yankees or Twentieth Century Sporting Club which would prevent them from dickering with the T. of C.

If the deal is consummated it would enable the T. of C. to break the long-time monopoly which the rival Twentieth Century Club has held on New York's two big ball parks, the Polo Grounds and Yankee Stadium.

Holly Mims, 155½, last night pounded out a nine-round unanimous decision over Garland Edwards, 159, in what was the fourth fight between the two.

Edwards won the first, the second was a draw, and Mims has now taken the last two bouts. Edwards, the boxer, was ahead in the early rounds but Mims came on fast toward the end to win. Mims was the slugger all the way, several times staggering Edwards with rights and lefts to the head.

In the other eight on the Metropolitan Police Boys Club benefit show Jerry Kartrich, 116, of New York, won a split decision from Johnny Arduini, 116½, of Washington.

In the first event, a four-rounder, Jesse Hegans, 143½, of Washington, won from Frank Ball, 141, also of Washington. A five-round all-local bout saw Puggy Lyons, 141½, take a split decision from Jimmy Briscoe.

Poker a la Femme

Haight Gets Fan Letter, Proud of It

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

THE POSTMAN could deliver my mail in a half-pound sack, but my recent column on family poker games did bring a fair response.

Half the poker players don't know what the other half are doing so, with that in mind, I'm going to pass along the following letter:

Dear Walter:

My husband and I, like increasing multitudes throughout the land, are members of a little group who get together regularly to play what you describe—a little bitterly, I'm afraid—as poker a la Femme.

My husband, too, was for many years an uncompromising, unreconstructed member of the straight-stud-and-draw school, but time and the Little Women finally wore him down. The men in our group who finally woke up to realize that their wives had muscled in permanently on their Saturday night penny ante game, were pretty sheepish about this wild-card stuff at first, and every so often would manfully deal a hand of "real poker," with many a loud remark about the virtues of same.

But you've got to admit that after several rousing rounds of High-Low, Seven-Toed Pete with deuces wild, straight stud seems colorless and the pot kind of meager.

So there seems to be less and less of this real-poker nonsense and the wild games get wilder as more and more couples sit around a table on Saturday night hatching up new hair-raisers.

WE ARE very grateful to you and to Cousin Mitchell for introducing us to Evil Eye, which sounds like a splendid game, indeed, and we can hardly wait until Saturday night to spring it on our little group of deep-thinkers.

You mentioned several species, however, Walter, that we had never heard of before, and my husband and I are very curious about the intricacies of Follow the Queen, Albany Night Boat and Get-Your-Feet-Wet.

The terminology of wild poker games is an interesting thing, many of the names having a strong colloquial flavor and you can often tell where a married couple are from by learning their particular title for certain games.

For instance, we play a thing we all call "Cape Girardeau," which is pretty baffling to visitors as the name has nothing to do with poker, even wild poker. The explanation is that it was introduced to us by a couple in our group who come from St. Louis, Mo. They learned it, in turn from a fellow visiting their St. Louis group who lived in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

We also stick stubbornly to some of our local mores in the play of certain games. You know the game Criss-Cross—maybe you call it something different—the one where you lay out the cards in the shape of a cross, middle card plays wild in the high hand and natural in the low? Well, one of our couples insists playing it according to what they call Missouri Rules—they wait until the very last card to turn the wild one, and they play aces high only.

MY HUSBAND and I deal it under our native Oklahoma Rules, wherein the wild card is turned immediately, and our aces are always easy. Having that wild card turned first has saved me, I judge, about ten years on my life expectancy. Having to wait for it till the last, according to the Missouri version, is just more than my blood pressure will bear.

We played with a fellow recently who announced that he was going to play straight draw, nothing wild. Before we could get our drooping jaws back in place, however, he added that in order to win you have to have three of a kind or better. You would be amazed how many times the deal can go around, Walter, before anybody gets better than two pairs—and what a pot that builds!

About the same time we encountered another sadistic little device called Grandma. This is straight stud, nothing wild—BUT you have to win TWO pots before you can claim any of it.

When you have won one hand you are said to have "One leg on Grandma," and after several players around the table have one leg on the old girl, and the pot is beginning to build up toward the chandelier, things get pretty demoralized until somebody gets that second leg.

My husband and I share your laments about the difficulties of dealing around, through and over bowls of light refreshments, and we think an earnest little band should be formed for the Prevention of Peanuts, Pretzels and Potato Chips at Poker Games.

I sometimes think that the old-fashioned straight-stud-and-draw poker players, who regard themselves as such rugged characters, and look upon "poker a la Femme" as child's play, just never exposed themselves to any of the latter, Walt. As you no doubt realize, it requires hardy nerves, a strong pair of lungs and a good digestion. But ain't it fun?

Kentucky, St. Louis Accept Bids to National Invitational

Rivals Play In Garden Mar. 12 to 19

New York, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The Kentucky Wildcats and the St. Louis Billikens today received and accepted bids to the National Invitational Basketball Tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Kentucky also indicated that, by taking the bid, it was not disqualifying itself from a bearth in the NCAA tournament, too.

The Wildcats have been rated the Nation's No. 1 team almost from the start of the season and their only loss in 26 games was by one basket to the Billikens in a game at the Sugar Bowl. Last year Kentucky won the NCAA tournament.

St. Louis, which is apparently out of the running for an NCAA bid after losing twice to the Oklahoma Aggies in the Missouri Valley Conference, will be the defending champion in the invitational. The meet will be held March 12, 14, 17, 19.

Regarding the NCAA, a Kentucky official said, "We will go if we are asked." As the unbeaten leaders of the Southeastern Conference, the Wildcats stand an excellent chance of getting the District 3 slot in the NCAA.

Kentucky has made no bones about its desire to meet St. Louis once again. The Billikens (18-3) handed Kentucky its only beating of the season, defeating the boys from the Blue Grass State, 42-40, in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl tourney last December. Since then Alex Groza, Wah Wah Jones, Ralph Beard & Co., have won 17 games in a row and boasts a 25-1 record.

Asa Bushnell, chairman of the N. I. T. selection committee, said that some 12 to 14 other schools were being considered for the other berths. He declined to name the teams in the running.

But it was learned that San Francisco (21-5), Utah (22-6) and City College of New York (16-5) figure strongly. Eight teams will make up the N. I. T. field.

Other quintets believed to be under consideration include Bradley (24-5), Bowling Green (20-6), Western Kentucky (25-3), Duquesne (17-4), Texas (17-6, Villanova (18-3), Butler (18-4), Chicago Loyola (20-5), La Salle (19-6), St. John's Brooklyn (13-8), New York University (10-6) and Manhattan (16-7).

Oklahoma A & M (19-3), the country's third ranking squad, would be more than welcome but the Aggies seemed headed for the NCAA meet.

Terps Easily Top VMI, 70-55

The University of Maryland closed its regular basketball season last night at College Park with a 70-55 win over the Cadets of VMI.

With the win the Old Liners finished the season with a record of 9 wins as against 17 losses. Even though the win was over a conference opponent it had no bearing on the Southern Conference tourney which opens Thursday at Durham, N. C.

For the Terpsters, lanky Charlie Mack led with 16 points and was closely paced by Lee Brawley with 15. For the military men from Lexington, Hugh Fain collected a total of 21.

Trainers Win, 33-14

Paced by Ed Ryan with 10 points, National Training School yesterday rolled up a 33-14 victory over Longwood on the losers' court.

Lions Meet Flyers Tonight; Pat Wilson Out

The Washington Lions will be without the services of defenseman Pat Wilson when they face the St. Louis Flyers tonight at Uline Arena.

Wilson's right ankle was fractured in last Saturday's game with the Hershey Bears.

Also hurt in the Hershey game was Augie Hercherratter whose jammed knee is responding to treatment and it is hoped that he will be able to play against the Flyers.

Filibuster Battle Starts in Senate

change was devised to clear the way for antipoll tax, antilynching, FEPC and other civil rights measures vesting "absolute powers" in the Federal Government over the States.

"Are we to sit here and vote to put a gag in our own mouths at the will of two thirds of the Senate?" said George. .

"Take this step, put the nose of the camel under the tent, and you will come to a majority rule. A political party, with a majority of one, will be able to do as it pleases."

Night Sessions Hinted

George spoke for only 44 minutes. Then Lucas recessed the Senate until noon today, when Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) will resume the Southern opposition. Lucas announced Senators will meet until about 6 p. m. today and hinted at night sessions as a last resort to break the filibuster.

Throughout the day Southern Democrats, floor-managed by Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) directed a running fire of questions at Lucas, the Vice President, and Senators Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) and Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.), bipartisan sponsors of the rules change.

Russell questioned the leader closely on the President's views and Lucas' own advocacy of majority vote cloture.

"The President of the United States is wholeheartedly behind this resolution and hopes the Senate will act with dispatch," Lucas replied.

He said he did not know whether Mr. Truman favors cloture by two-thirds or a majority vote. He said the proposed change to holeproof two-thirds cloture is "reasonable," but he (Lucas) will support an amendment providing cloture by a constitutional majority (a majority of all 96 Senators).

Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.), Senate majority whip, meanwhile sent to the desk such an amendment, permitting debate to be shut off by "a majority of all members of the Senate (including members who are not present or do not vote)."

Vice President Barkley, who as majority leader supported the President's civil rights program and tried many times unsuccessfully to invoke the present ineffective cloture rule, then made an unusual statement from the chair.

He said he conceived it his "duty and function" to enforce the rules and he wanted all Senators to know in advance that he will strictly apply them throughout the debate, without waiting for points of order to be raised on the floor.

One Rule Stressed

The one rule that he stressed, that has trapped many a napping filibusterer in the past, is that no Senator may yield to another Senator except for a question, unless the Senate grants its unanimous consent for him to do so.

"A Senator is not required to yield for any purpose," said the Vice President. "If he yields for any other purpose (than a question) he can be taken from the floor."

Barkley also stressed that no Senator can speak more than twice on the pending question in one "legislative day." In Senate lingo, a legislative day can run for weeks—for the duration of debate on the pending question.

Russell Questions Barkley

The Vice President further announced that no motion to call up another bill can be made under the rules until the Hayden-Wherry resolution is disposed of.

Russell peppered Barkley with questions, saying Senators are entitled to know "their full rights." Barkley agreed, but said he could not anticipate in advance every situation in which a Senator might be in violation of the rules.

Rules Chairman Hayden, co-sponsor of the resolution, next traced the history of the Senate's 1917 cloture rule and the two loopholes that were subsequently found in it: Senators may debate without limit on (1) approval of the Senate journal and (2) any motion to call up a bill. He said the proposed resolution plugged both loopholes and gave the Senate a "sound" cloture rule.

Then Wherry, the other co-sponsor, told why he favored the change.

"When the outright filibuster stage is reached, the Senate no longer is a legislative body," said Wherry. "It is the springboard for a mockery of republican processes."

Leading off for the Southerners, George said that "group interests" supporting the civil rights program are "the real driving power" behind the rules change.

He discussed the three leading civil rights proposals and declared each "offensive to the American Constitution."

He said the poll tax is already "on the way" out in the last six or seven States that have used it, but the Constitution expressly reserves to each State the right to determine the qualifications of its voters.

He said he opposes mob violence "with all the vigor of my soul "but you cannot give the Federal Government the power to prevent violence in a State (anti-lynch) unless you assert that the Federal Government possesses total and absolute police power.

And he charged that Fair Employment practices legislation is a "glaring" effort "to say to a man: 'You can't select your personal associates or business associates."

Red Cross Drive Opens

be one of the most significant in the organization's long history. For example, in its disaster-relief role, the Red Cross answered the call of the distressed in 303 separate emergencies. Comparatively few of these were catalogued as major catastrophes. Let us remember, however, that whenever disaster strikes, the havoc wrought is just as devastating and bewildering to those individuals affected, whether there are 100 families or 100,000 families overwhelmed.

Varied Jobs Cited

Through its services to our armed forces and to our veterans and their dependents, the Red Cross has remained a counselor and stalwart friend of our troops as well as all former servicemen.

Through its home nursing and first aid and water safety courses, it has spread better health habits and reduced the accident toll throughout the land. Through Junior Red Cross members in the schools, it has promoted better citizenship and world understanding among our youth. Through a vast network of local chapters, the Red Cross provides a service which reaches the community—the Nation—the world.

Welcome the volunteer solicitors who soon will call upon you. They are giving not only their funds, but their energies as well. Let us oversubscribe the 1949 goal of the Red Cross. Let us keep this partnership of the people ready and at full strength.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, on the same broadcast, praised the "magnificent wartime spirit and achievements" of the Red Cross.

Turning to its peacetime role, he said: "No agency of our people is so well fitted as the American Red Cross to care for the injured, to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked and to house the homeless."

Boy Gangs Rounded Up

New York, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The fatal shooting of a 15-year-old boy led police today to round up two youthful Brooklyn gangs who were apparently preparing for a showdown fight with an arsenal of rifles, revolvers and knives.

Twenty-five youths, many of them members of the "Black Hat" and the "Bristol Street" gangs, were taken into custody but only eight were held—three for juvenile delinquency and five for violation of the Sullivan law. They ranged in age from 14 to 20.

Police moved swiftly after Stanley Fox was accidentally shot as he was examining a revolver at the home of a friend, Harold Gelman, 14. Officers said Fox intended to buy the gun to protect himself against the rival gang.

The gun was placed in a hollowed-out dictionary and, when Fox picked it up, it discharged, the bullet striking him in the head. He died less than an hour and one-half later. Police searched the Gelman home and those of other boys belonging to the two gangs. They found five rifles, half a dozen revolvers, air rifles and homemade "zip" guns. They also seized a number of knives, a machete and a considerable amount of ammunition.

Detective David Cohen revealed in magistrate's court that the two gangs planned to fight it out this evening at a playground at Public School 156. He said another gang, known as the Musketeers, planned to fight on the side of the Black Hats.

The dispute, it was said, centered about an argument over the prowess of the soft ball teams of the gangs.

Patient in Veterans Hospital Arrested in Mahoney Slaying

New Orleans, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—A patient at a veterans hospital here, wearing a green-striped sweater, was arrested for questioning today in the Mardi Gras murder of millionaire James A. Mahoney and police termed him 'the hottest suspect yet." The man was identified as Lewis Eugene Hoover, 25, of Louisville, Ky.

Police said Hoover admitted having dinner with Mahoney a few hours before the Bristol, Va., millionaire was slain by someone who broke his neck with a towel and beat him savagely on the head and face.

Police said Hoover had been in the hospital since last Tuesday, the day Mahoney's body was found in a French Quarter hotel room. When admitted to the hospital, police reported, Hoover had bruises on his face, and his hands were swollen.

PONTIAC

PONTIAC—DIVISION OF GENERAL MOTORS

Less than a month after the 1949 Pontiac had scored a sensational nation-wide success on its formal Announcement Day, a stunning cream-colored Convertible rolled off the assembly line at the great Pontiac plant in Pontiac, Michigan. It was Pontiac Car Number 3,000,000.

This historic event was of dual significance: It brought Pontiac Motor Division into the small and select group of companies which have endured long enough and built well enough to manufacture 3,000,000 cars bearing the same name. And it demonstrated the soundness of a manufacturing and product policy inaugurated by Pontiac's present management some years ago.

At that time, it was decided that any car to bear the Pontiac name in the future would be, first, last and always, a GOOD car. Naturally, it was the intention to make each new model as smart and attractive as possible and to give it fine performance. But in addition—as all Pontiac dealers now know so well—it was determined that these forthcoming Pontiacs over the years would be outstanding for dependability, long life and economy!

The fine reputation which the Pontiac car has gained as a result of this policy is the basic reason for Pontiac's continuing growth and popularity. And undoubtedly, it was also an important reason why over 4,000,000 people visited our and other Pontiac dealers' showrooms across the nation to see the 1949 Pontiac for the first time. People are naturally interested in seeing a new model, representing an improvement over a car which from their own experience or that of their friends, they know to be fundamentally good.

This principle of placing major emphasis on sound design, high quality and fine manufacturing, will continue to be the basic manufacturing policy of the Pontiac Motor Division. It has proved successful in the past. And we are confident it will prove even more successful in the future.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Employment Security May Be Transferred To Labor Department

The Bureau of Employment Security would be transferred to the Labor Department under a plan tentatively agreed to by the Hoover Commission. The Administration is ready to throw its support behind the proposal.

If the plan goes through, the United States Employment Service would go back to Labor. The GOP Congress last year forced the transfer of the USES to Federal Security where it was merged with Unemployment Compensation into the Bureau of Employment Security. The Labor Department has been seeking control over unemployment insurance for years.

The transfer plan already is being fought by employment security officials in State governments. These State officials also are excited about another report —that the Truman Administration will seek to completely Federalize unemployment insurance. Such a plan is being discussed by Administration leaders; that's for sure.

GORDON DEAN has the backing of Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) to fill the vacancy on the Atomic Energy Commission. He's the former law partner of the senator and they once worked together in the Justice Department. Dean is now a lawyer in San Diego.

GARLAND FERGUSON may be reappointed to the Federal Trade Commission after all. Powerful North Carolina Democrats are reported to have about convinced the White House that Ferguson should continue on the job.

MARITIME: Congress has passed and sent to the White House a bill to allow Maritime to continue to sell, charter, and operate ships. The agency would have had to lay off several thousand employes if the bill had been blocked.

ELMER B. STAATS is the new executive assistant director of the Budget Bureau. ROGER W. JONES moved up to succeed him as assistant director in charge of legislation. LEO C. MARTIN, who is planning to retire soon, was made special assistant to the director. WILLIAM F. McCANDLESS moved up to succeed him as assistant director in charge of estimates. WILLIAM F. SCHAUB succeeds McCandless as deputy chief of estimates, and SAM A. BROADBENT was appointed assistant chief of estimates to succeed James E. Scott who retired yesterday. Director Frank Pace is convinced he has the best staff in the Federal service.

SAVINGS of 18 million dollars which will wipe out about 8000 jobs throughout Government was revealed yesterday by the Budget Bureau. The cutbacks were ordered under standards which the Bureau fixed for the operation of personnel, payroll and voucher offices.

In this fiscal year there are an average of 43,356 Government people in this work. The budget standards will force the agencies to cut down to 36,721 employes during the 1950 fiscal year that begins July 1. Under the standards, one personnel employe is permitted for every 88 employes; one employe for every 3401 vouchers and one payroll employe for every 193 workers.

RETIREMENT: The Civil Service Commission yesterday asked Congress to give married women employes the same retirement benefits as men.

At present, a married man may chose to receive a reduced annuity so that his widow, on his death, may receive a pension for the remainder of her life. But a married woman employe can't give her husband similar protection. Since she must pay for it, Civil Service wants her given the benefit. Chairman Murray of the House Civil Service Committee, has in a bill to carry out the commission suggestion.

UP AGAIN: Federal employment in this city went up about 1200 in January. A decline had been reported for several previous months. On February 1, Civil Service counted 211,800 employes in the executive branch here. The overall total in this country was 1,900,900.

NEW AGENCY: A bill by Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) would create an independent Federal Traffic Bureau to handle the Government's freight problems.

FCSPH: Another new agency would be the Federal Commission on Services for the Physically Handicapped. This bill has wide support. A score of senators are sponsoring it.

2 Leaders Of Citizens Federation Back Young

Connaughton, Newell Want Commissioner Renamed, With Party Politics Left Out

Two leaders of the Federation of Citizens Associations last night strongly indorsed Commissioner John Russell Young for reappointment May 17.

They were John H Connaughton, federation president, and Clifford H. Newell, past president and active figure in forming the group's policies.

Would Deplore Departure

"I would deplore any departure from this plan (nonpartisan appointment) at this time," Newell said.

Declaring the District is facing a serious fiscal problem, Newell said it might prove "devastating, as far as the taxpayers are concerned," if a new man should be appointed. "Our only aim is to keep the District out of bankruptcy," he said.

Referring to Young's familiarity with plans for improving the city's fiscal condition, Newell said he felt there should be no change "so long as we have our present form of government."

Connaughton said he supported his colleague's remarks "completely." Both stressed they were speaking as individuals and that it is the policy of the federation not to back particular persons for public office.

In formal action last night, the Mid-City Citizens Association, a member of the federation, indorsed Morgan's appointment with a near-unanimous vote.

Backs Tax Program

To improve the District's fiscal situation, the federation went on record at its February 5 meeting as favoring a 2 per cent sales tax, income tax on incomes of more than $5000 net, increasing the Federal Government's contribution toward District upkeep and raising the tax on liquor, and as opposing increases in real estate and personal property taxes.

The group also advocates home rule with elected city councilmen.

'Missing' Attorney Was Resting

Leon A. Ransom, Washington attorney, was visiting a friend in New Jersey during three of the four days he was reported missing here, it was learned yesterday.

The friend, Dr. N. J. Watts, a dentist of Union, N. J., said Ransom appeared at his home Friday and seemed "nervous and tired." Watts said Ransom stayed at his house and "rested most of the time."

Watts said he did not realize Ransom had been reported missing here until Sunday when he saw a newspaper account of Ransom's disappearance. Watts then phoned Mrs. Ransom.

Mrs. Ransom last night told a reporter she did not know the reason for her husband's unannounced trip to New Jersey. However, she said Ransom had been in ill health for many years and had been subject to the stress of "overwork."

The whereabouts of Ransom between Thursday afternoon, when he failed to show up at his office to meet a client, and Friday afternoon, when he turned up at his friend's home in New Jersey, remained unexplained.

Ransom, 49, chairman of the Committee for Racial Democracy and former acting dean of Howard University Law School, was expected to return to Washington shortly.

Dr. Watts said Ransom was under the effects of a sedative yesterday and could not be questioned.

A son, Leon A. Ransom, jr., 19-year-old student at Catholic University, went to Union yesterday to bring his father back to Washington.

Meanwhile, Henry Thomas, president of Local 74, Hod Carriers and Building Labor Union, said that any suggestion that the internal affairs of his union were connected with Ransom's disappearance was "absurd."

Thomas' remarks followed reports that Ransom had been threatened last Wednesday at a meeting of Local 74 at which he was defending two dismissed union employes.

Thomas said the two men who told of hearing threats against Ransom had been discharged from their union jobs at least four months ago.

Result of Driving in Wrong Traffic Lane

HITS BUS HEAD-ON—This wreck is what is left of auto driven by Norman H. Stokely, 48, of Phoenixville, Pa., after it ran head-on into a Greyhound bus yesterday in Arlington. Police said Stokely was northbound in the southbound lane on U. S. Route 1, near the Virginia end of the Highway Bridge. The bus is shown in the background

Driver Injured As Auto Hits Bus Head-on

A Pennsylvania man was critically hurt yesterday when his car struck a Greyhound bus headon as he drove in the wrong traffic lane about 500 yards from the Virginia side of the 14th Street Bridge.

Police said the auto driver, Norman H. Stokely, 48, of Phoenixville, Pa., was northbound in the southbound lane when he struck the bus on U. S. Route 1.

Three bus passengers were slightly injured. Driver of the Norfolk-bound bus was listed as Lester C. Carnohan, 29, of Hewlett, Va.

Park Police, who handled the accident, said they had been unable to question Stokely to find how he had gotten in the wrong lane.

They said he might have entered the three-lane southbound road from the network of highways surrounding the Pentagon Building.

At the scene of the accident—the overpass crossing Boundary dr. —U. S. Route 1 is six lanes wide, three lanes for each direction separated by a grass center strip.

The bus driver told police Stokely's oncoming car was hidden from him by southbound traffic in front of the bus until the colliding vehicles were 35 feet apart.

Police said Stokely, apparently seeing two lanes of traffic facing him head-on, shifted his car to the lane next to the center grass strip, where he struck the bus.

The front end of Stokely's car was demolished by the impact. Also damaged was the front of the bus.

Two of the injured bus riders, Mrs. Margaret Faulkner, 68, of Fredericksburg, Va., and Mrs. Elsie Sanders of 48 H st. n.e., were treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises and released.

A third passenger, Pvt. Robert Hadley, a Fort Belvoir, Va., soldier, was treated for bruises on the scene.

Property Owners Elect Heitmuller As President

Theodore Heitmuller, 812 Jefferson st. nw., was elected president of the Washington Property Owners Association last night at an organization meeting at the Lafayette Hotel.

The association voted to request the Commissioners to withhold any action under the new egress law until six months after copies of the law are made available to the public. The law became effective January 1.

Other officers elected by the 50 property owners present were John Safer, vice president and chairman of the board; Nathan Lubar, secretary; Morris Bishop, treasurer, and Clifford H. Newell, Sam Rosey and Arthur Katims, board members.

2 Men Held In Baby Girl's Traffic Death

A coroner's jury held two men responsible for the traffic death of 2½-year-old Sandra Breen last Saturday, and ordered them held on charges of negligent homicide for action of Municipal Court.

The two men, who were released under $1000 bond each, are Stanley L. Warren, 27, 402 9th st. ne., and Francis C. Faunce, 34, 245 8th st. se.

Child Killed Saturday

The child, whose parents live at 4921 Temple rd., Temple Hills, Md., died of a crushed chest and cerebral hemorrhage after an accident about 4 p. m. Saturday at Nichols ave. and South Capitol st.

The jury cleared Mrs. Alice Randall, 4350 St. Barnabas rd., Temple Hills, Md., driver of the car in which Sandra was riding.

According to testimony, Faunce was turning right from the center lane of Nichols ave. into South Capitol st. and struck the right rear side of a truck driven by Warren. Warren's truck then skidded across the street into a northbound lane of Nichols ave., where it collided with the car driven by Mrs. Randall.

Admits Improper Turn

Faunce admitted to police he was making an improper right turn from the center lane, but said he signaled for a right-hand turn before doing so. Warren told police Faunce signaled for a left-hand turn, indicating it was safe to pass on his right.

A witness, Raymond Streeks of 3138 Buena Vista ter. se., said the truck was traveling about 30 miles per hour at the time of the accident and stated Faunce had slowed to 5 miles per hour.

Police inspection of Faunce's 1935 Ford disclosed its brakes were in unsatisfactory condition, according to testimony by Pvt. David Chefer of the Accident Investigation Unit.

Falls Church Delays Tax Talk

Falls Church City Council last night postponed discussion of license tax reclassification for city merchants until a special council meeting Thursday.

The discussion centers around proposed reclassification of the merchants for license tax purposes to include business not now taxed.

Embassy Domestic Servants' Diplomatic Immunity Upheld

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the diplomatic immunity of embassy domestic servants from suit for separate-maintenance payments.

The court affirmed the dismissal of a suit brought by Mrs. Rosa H. Carrera of McLean, Va., against her estranged spouse, Amable Hidalgo Carrera, a butler-chauffeur for the Czechoslovakian Embassy.

The Carreras are nationals of Ecuador but are permanent residents of this country.

Carrera was on the State Department diplomatic "White List" and immunity was expressly requested for Carrera in the case by the Czechoslovakian Ambassador.

The court held that diplomatic immunity applies to the field of domestic relations, declaring:

"It has long been a settled rule of law that foreign diplomatic representatives are exempt from all local processes in the country to which they are accredited."

McLeish Bill To Aid Towns Is Outlined

Communities in Prince Georges County could exchange municipal services under a bill submitted to the State Legislature at its current session, the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce was told last night.

Its sponsor, Delegate George McLeish, said his proposals would (1) allow towns to contract with each other or with the county for exchange of services, and (2) permit policemen in incorporated towns to make emergency arrests outside their own jurisdiction.

Speaking at the trade body's monthly dinner at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club, McLeish said he believed his measure would enable some towns to save money and increase efficiency.

As an example, he said two or more towns could sign contracts under which they jointly could finance maintenance of streets and other municipal functions. They also could contract with county officials on the same basis.

His police proposal, McLeish said, would authorize town police to leave their own jurisdictions in pursuit of law violators and would eliminate any question as to the validity of arrests in such cases.

Earlier the trade body heard two speakers attack the equity of the present system of taxation for fire protection in the county.

Vincent A. Simmel, treasurer of the Prince Georges Volunteer Firemen's Association, and Karl A. Young, chief of the Mount Rainier Fire Department, both charged the present method does not provide a fair distribution of funds collected as fire taxes.

D. C. Bills Introduced In Senate

Senate District Committee Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) yesterday introduced a series of bills, some at the request of the District Commissioners, some prepared by the District Bar Association, to:

1. Give Juvenile Court concurrent jurisdiction with District Court to order support payments for illegitimate children.

2. Facilitate service of legal papers here on nonresident individuals and business firms.

3. Provide a $25-a-day legal fee to court-appointed lawyers for defendants in criminal cases who can't hire their own lawyers.

Stricter Boiler Inspection

4. Tighten District laws for boiler inspection.

5. Raise from $2 to $5 the annual registration fee for the practice of podiatry in the District.

6. Boost from $600 to $1000 the maximum the courts may allow from a deceased person's estate to pay for his funeral.

7. Let estates be settled at election of a deceased person's personal representative six months after he qualifies as such with the Court.

Would Defend Annulment Suits

8. Call for court appointment of an attorney to defend uncontested annulment suits.

9. Permit service of legal papers in annulment cases by publication rather than by personal service.

10. Provide a family allowance and simplified procedure in settlement of small estates.

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) introduced a bill to let District Court appoint persons to take charge as a "committee" of property of individuals who are prevented by age, or mental physical handicaps, from handling their own affairs.

Montgomery Promotes Detective C. V. Miller

Montgomery County Police Chief Charles Orme last night announced the promotion, effective today, of Detective Corpl. Carroll V. Miller, 38, to detective sergeant.

Miller, who lives at 8413 Dixon ave., Silver Spring, is attached to the Bethesda substation. He joined the force eight years ago and has been a detective for the past 2½ years.

Continuation Of D. C. Rent Control Seen

Extension of Present Law for 15 Months Indicated Following House Unit Hearing

A 15-month extension of District rent control to June 30, 1950 appears likely to be recommended by House District Committee members.

This was indicated last night by members of a subcommittee which heard spokesmen for Washington groups argue for and against rent control through a seven-hour hearing at the Capitol.

To the subcommittee, headed by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.), witnesses brought many echoes of testimony presented to the District Commissioners in a hearing February 11.

Based on their own hearing, the Commissioners, represented by Guy Mason and Corporation Counsel Vernon West, called on the subcommittee for a two-year extension of District rent control, to conform with the Federal bill as first proposed.

They also sought two major changes in the present law: Recontrol of converted housing which was taken out of control last year; and safeguarding of apartment tenants from eviction in a purchase of their building by a cooperative. The second feature would require 65 per cent of tenants in occupancy to be members of the cooperative it could take over.

Both changes brought sharp reaction from subcommittee members. Representative John J. Allen, jr. (R., Calif.), voiced belief that it would be "a breach of faith" for Congress to take controls off the converted housing one year and put them back the next.

Allen also suggested that the move to curtail cooperative apartment buying was designed to give preference to tenants above owners who invest capital in a home.

Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell said that on the question of converted housing "we have had no difficulty where there has been a real conversion." He said the trouble came with owners who made a change, like installing a wash basin in a room, or putting in a beaver-board partition, called it a conversion, and drastically increased the rent.

On the cooperatives issue, Cogswell strongly urged the proposed safeguards for tenants.

Board Accused Of Flaunting Zoning Rules

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission last night was charged with deliberately issuing plumbing permits in violation of Takoma Park's zoning regulations.

City Councilman Sherwood Githens made the charge before Mayor John C. Post and the City Council at a meeting in the Takoma Park Firehouse.

The council authorized Githens to seek cooperation of the Sanitary Commission by requestion it to notify the municipality of all applications for permits which might involve a violation.

In other business, the council accepted with regret the resignation of Robert Ellis, assistant superintendent of public works, effective Friday.

City Clerk Harold Hilliard was instructed to "sound out" local attorneys who would be interested in taking over the position of corporation counsel now vacant due to the resignation of J. Bradshaw.

Bradshaw left the post a month ago to devote his full time to his position as a member of the Montgomery Council. The position pays $80 per month.

Mayor Post said D. D. Lamond, an applicant for the job, had withdrawn his application due to poor health.

Heart Failure Called Cause of Cell Death

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of death due to congestive heart failure in the case of John Raymond Hitte, 61, of 1215 W st. se. Hitte was found unconscious about 12:30 a. m. in a cell at the Eleventh Police Precinct station house, where he had been booked on a charge of intoxication. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Gallinger Hospital.

Girl, 8, Victim

Deadlocked Rape Jury Discharged

An all-male Montgomery County Circuit Court jury was discharged last night after it was unable to agree on a verdict in a case in which a 28-year-old filling station employe was charged with rape of an 8-year-old girl.

Hamlet

In discharging the jury, which deliberated 6 hours and 25 minutes, Judge Stedman Prescott said the jurors' inability to agree was "unfortunate."

He cited the fact that the child would again have to testify, another jury would be "inconvenienced," and the defendant probably would have to remain in jail.

State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson said a re-trial probably will be ordered within two months.

The girl, daughter of a Silver Spring electrician, took the stand herself during the trial at Rockville and testified she was ravished in her bedroom in the upper bunk of a double-deck bed.

The defendant, David Allen Hamlet, 28-year-old filling station attendant, denied under oath the girl's statement he assaulted her when the father left them alone in the house last November 5 to take home the baby sitter he had hired, while the two men went out for the evening.

Swears He's Innocent

"Before God and man if this is the last breath I take, I am innocent of this charge," Hamlet declared emphatically.

"I did not molest this girl; I have a 10-year-old daughter myself," he added.

Questioned by Judge Stedman Prescott, when she took the stand, the child, clad in a blue dress and wearing pigtails tied with a white bow, said she knew about God.

"God would be angry if I didn't tell the truth," she said.

Says She Resisted

Hamlet, she said, came into her room when her father left the house and although she tried to resist, he attacked her. Asleep in the lower bunk, she said, were her 6-year-old brother and 4-year-old sister.

Her claim that she had been attacked, was corroborated by Dr. Thomas R. Huxtable, jr., an interne at Washington Sanitarium, who examined the girl at the insistence of her mother and police four days after the alleged offense.

He also said tests showed she had contracted gonorrhea.

In questioning the physician, State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson brought out that it is possible for a person previously afflicted with gonorrhea to transmit the disease even though a test should show negative.

Such a test was made of Hamlet by police, it was learned, and the results were negative.

Others Hinted Responsible

"The State has not presented one shred of evidence to show that the defendant had gonorrhea," shouted Defense Attorney Harold S. Smith of Rockville.

Both Smith and a colleague, Andrew W. Starratt, jr., also of Rockville, hinted the assault could have been committed by the 12-year-old boy who was the baby sitter, or his 14-year-old brother, who occasionally watched the children at night.

Testimony showed that Hamlet occasionally slept in the house and did so on the night in question.

Defense attorneys also attempted to show prejudice against the defendant on the part of the mother. Hamlet's lawyers also told the jurors that "children live in a virtual fairy land and often imagine things."

Arlington P-TA Backs 3.2 Million School Budget

The Arlington County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations last night pledged its support to a 1949-1950 county school budget of "not less than $3,215,000."

More than 50 delegates from 30 county schools met at the Stonewall Jackson School, 855 N. Edison st.

The council resolved that all local P-TA's should write the county board of their support of the school budget.

In another resolution, the council requested the county board to hold hearings on the proposed budget in an auditorium large enough to accommodate all those who might attend.

Woman Plucks Rifle Bullet From Head, Walks to Doctor

A nearby Maryland woman was shot with a .22 caliber rifle from 10 feet away Saturday night, but plucked the bullet from her head.

Prince Georges County police said yesterday that the victim, Dorothy Freeman, 35, 8790 Livingstone rd., Chapel Hill, Md., produced the spent clug. It had lodged in her head just back of the right ear.

The wound was termed minor by a physician who treated her.

The shooting story came to light in Upper Marlboro Police Court when an assault charge against Clarence Chew, 22, 8910 Old Fort rd., Chapel Hill, was continued until April 1. The woman said Chew fired the shot.

Policeman Charles Perrygo said Miss Freeman told him she was shot when she intervened in an argument in a Chapel Hill tavern where she was bartender. She said Chew fired the single-shot rifle several times, calmly re-loading after each shot. Only one bullet hit her, she said.

Perrygo said Mrs. Freeman went unassisted to a doctor's office nearby. The policeman expressed the belief that the woman owed her life to a defective rifle or a defective bullet. He said it was obvious that the force of the bullet had been spent when it struck.

Northwest Area Zoned For 8-Story Apartments

90-Foot Height Limitation Is Put On Foggy Bottom Section by Board

The Foggy Bottom section of Washington was opened to construction of modern, eight-story, elevator apartments as the result of action yesterday of the District Zoning Commission.

In another decision, the commission turned down a request to rezoning the Friendship home of the late Evalyn Walsh McLean to permit erection of stores and a small apartment house there.

The way was cleared for the Foggy Bottom conversion program with District Building approval to a rezoning of the mainly industrial area to residential with a 90-foot height limitation.

The 32-acre tract, bounded by K, 24th, and E sts., and Rock Creek Parkway nw, is owned by the Washington Gas Light Co., and is now on the market for sale.

Opposed by Grant

Gen. U. S. Grant 3d., chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, has vigorously opposed the gas company's 90-foot height request on grounds that it would permit "skyscraper-type" tenement housing and population density as crowded as the densest sections of New York City.

NCPPC has favored rezoning but urged holding building height limits to 60 feet or between five and six floors high.

E. J. Boothby, vice president of the utility company, argued against the 60-foot height at a public hearing two weeks ago, declaring that such limitation would cause a 25 per cent depreciation in the value of the property.

In the Foggy Bottom rezoning, a 100-foot strip on both sides of Virginia ave, nw., in the area was left first commercial by the Zoning Commission.

Georgetown Protests

The proposal of the trustees of Mrs. McLean's will to rezone commercial the block-long estate at Wisconsin ave. and R st., nw., has been protested by two Georgetown citizens' associations. Residents contended that such rezoning would lower the value of the expensive homes in the section.

In other decisions, the zoning commission:

1. Rejected a proposal to permit off-street parking lots in residential areas up to 500 feet from commercial zones. Now parking lots are permissible if separated from commercial zones only by an alley.

2. Turned down five other requests to rezone residential properties to restricted, semirestricted or commercial.

Columbia Hospital Names Martin Assistant Aide

Appointment of John D. Martin as assistant administrator of Columbia Hospital for Women was announced yesterday by the administrator, Col. N. L. McDiarmid.

For the last eight months Martin has been serving as assistant director of Children's Hospital.

The son of a clergyman, the Rev. John G. Martin, superintendent of St. Barnabas Hospital, Newark, N. J., Martin came to Washington from Muncie, Ind. There he had served for one year as assistant superintendent at the Ball Memorial Hospital.

Martin is married, has two children and lives at 1529 W. Falkland st., Silver Spring. His position at Children's will not be filled "in line with our policy to trim expenses as much as possible," according to Dr. Montgomery Blair.

Area News in Brief

Traffic Ticket 'Lost' For Lost Girl's Mom

A woman motorist, who parked overtime because she was looking for her lost daughter, was one of 88 motorists for whom traffic tickets were adjusted by police last week.

Mrs. Minnie B. Schleifman, 5619 First pl. nw., said she parked her car temporarily, while she and her daughter, Nan, 8, went into a downtown department store to pick up a package.

When she turned around from the counter, Nan had disappeared and Mrs. Schleifman said she spent some time looking for the child before finding her.

Traffic tickets were canceled for the following motorists because of diplomatic immunity. Juan Guzman-Cruchaga, Chilean Embassy, parked in alley; Reuben J. Gordon, Chilean Embassy, parked in alley; Michel Lancrenon, French Embassy, parked overtime; Antonio Vega, Chilean Embassy, parked in alley; Thomas Mansy, Embassy of Iraq, parked in entrance; Sheikh Mohammed Muhtasib, Legation of Saudi Arabia, parked in a "no parking at anytime" zone.

Held on Slashing Charge

Henry L Abney, 30, 814 22d st. nw., was held yesterday for grand jury action on a charge of slashing his estranged wife's neck with a penknife.

The wife, Mrs. Vernell Abney, 22, appeared in Municipal Court with 107 stitches.

The offense occurred, police said, after Abney went to her home at 54 Pierce st. nw. to effect a reconciliation.

Fire Destroys Barn

Fire late Sunday destroyed a 48-stall cow barn on the farm of Harold Smith, near Poolesville, Md., causing damage estimated at about $10,000.

Gaithersburg firemen prevented spread of the blaze to a 60-stall cow barn 20 feet away. No cattle were injured, but 40 tons of hay was destroyed.

2 Jailed in Numbers Case

Two District men each were given 60 days in jail yesterday in Bethesda Police Court for possession of numbers slips. They were: William Henry Peter, 31, 2624 K st. nw., and Lewis F. Taylor, 29, 14 Patterson st. ne.

Money 'Wings Back'

When money takes wing these days, it usually doesn't come back. But it did for an attractive, unidentified Government girl whose payday dollars blew away in the wind yesterday afternoon.

It happened when a man brushed against her as she was waiting for a Connecticut ave. bus at 13th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. about 4:50 p. m. Her wallet fell from her hand, spilling those precious bills into the eager fingers of the wind.

Fifty-nine dollars—two twenties, one ten and nine ones—floated away.

More than a dozen fellow bus-riders immediately deployed over the area between the Benjamin Franklin Postoffice and the Coast Guard Building and tracked down every strayed dollar! One twenty was found hiding in a puddle under a car.

Admiral David Foote Sellers, who died a the Bethesda Naval Hospital January 27 at the age of 74, left an estate of $112,750, it was learned yesterday. The property goes to his wife, Mrs. Anita Clay Evans Sellers, 2216 Wyoming ave. nw., according to District Court papers.

Angus G. Dowling

Angus Gabriel Dowling, 40, an employe of the National Brewing Co., died unexpectedly yesterday at his home, 1615 Kenyon st. nw.

Mr. Dowling

A native of Ozark, Ala., Mr. Dowling had lived in Washington for 12 years. He was a Mason and an Elk.

In addition to his widow, the former Alma Goff, Mr. Dowling is survived by his stepmother, Mrs. H. O. Dowling, 15 Riggs rd. nw.; four sisters, Mrs. Gertrude D. Kelley, Mrs. Helen D. McChesney and Miss Jeannette Dowling, all of Washington, and Mrs. Carolyn D. Hile of New York City; and a brother Horace O'Neil Dowling of Boone, N. C.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 1 p. m. from the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Johnson Dies; Kin of James Monroe

Mrs. William Crawford Johnson, great-granddaughter of President James Monroe, died at her home in Frederick, Md., yesterday. She was in her 80s and had been in ill health for some time.

A native of Washington, she married Dr. Johnson here in 1882. He died in 1943.

Mrs. Johnson's grandmother, Maria Hester Monroe, is often referred to as the first White House bride.

Mrs. Johnson moved from Washington when her father, Samuel L. Gouverneur, jr., former United States consul at Foochow, China, went to Frederick to edit the Maryland Herald.

Active in civic affairs, she was for many years secretary of the board of managers of the Protestant Episcopal Orphans Home, and was the last surviving member of the original board of managers of the Frederick Home for the Aged.

She is survived by a son and two daughters. One daughter, Mrs. Green Clay Goodloe, lives at 1921 19th st. nw.

Funeral services will be held at her late residence Wednesday afternoon.

Funeral Rites Wednesday for Mrs. Simonton

Funeral services for Mrs. Dora Agnes Simonton, 65, who died of heart trouble Sunday, will be held at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday at Sacred Heart Catholic Church, 16th st. and Park rd. nw. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Simonton

Mrs. Simonton succumbed at her home, 1879 Newton st. nw., after being stricken a month ago.

Her husband, Vincent DePaul Simonton, a lawyer, is the head of the Alcohol Tax Division of the Chief Counsel's office in the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Both lifelong residents of Washington, they were married here in 1904.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Simonton is survived by her sister, Mrs. Alice L. Knowles, of the Newton st. address, and three sons, Lawrence J. Simonton and Arthur Vincent Simonton, who live at home, and Edmund J. Simonton, Baltimore.

Georgetown Group Approves Year More of Rent Control

The Georgetown Citizens Association last night adopted resolutions favoring extension of rent control in the District "for not more than one year" and asking adoption of a sales tax here.

Meeting in St. John's Parish Hall, Potomac and O sts. nw., association members qualified their indorsement of rent controls by stipulating that old buildings remodeled to create more dwelling untis, and all new dwellings, be exeluded from controls.

The association's Public Improvements Committee was authorized to study a program to eliminate the Japanese beetle in the community, and make recommendations.

Mid-City

The Mid-City Citizens Association last night indorsed the bill which would give the District Commissioners permanent right to decide on daylight saving time for the District.

The group also backed Thomas P. Morgan for commissioner in its meeting at the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw.

Shipley Terrace

The Shipley Terrace Citizens Association last night voted to seek the aid of the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission in obtaining a church site for the community.

The action was taken at a meeting in the Stanton School, Good Hope and Stanton rds. se., after it was stated that real estate developers in the vicinity refuse to sell parcels of land for the purpose. About 7000 persons live in the section without church facilities, it was said.

The association also amended its constitution to annex the section of Maryland just south of Southern ave., an area which includes several new apartment projects. In this connection it was voted to request the owners of the Oxon Run Apartments to provide space for a community meeting room within the project.

Northwest Council

The Northwest Council of Citizens Associations last night appointed a special committee to obtain from the District Police Department an explanation of a recent ban on parking in driveways.

Ten delegates to the council, representing eight-member organizations, met at the Chevy Chase Community Building, Connecticut ave. and McKinley st. nw.

North Capitol

Dr. James A. Gannon, of the Citizens Committee to Aid Tuberculosis Control, last night urged citizen support of a congressional appropriation of $155,265 to combat the disease locally.

He spoke to the North Capitol Citizens Association at the Atonement Lutheran Church, North Capitol and U sts.

The chest X-ray survey last year uncovered 6,000 new cases of tuberculosis, Dr. Gannon said, more than 200 per cent above expectations, and Glenn Dale Sanitorium can admit only one new case a day. Some beds are available, but the shortage of doctors and nurses forbids adding to the patient load, he said.

The hospital requires 35 additional nurses, Dr. Gannon stated, which he estimated would cost about $92,000.

Oldest Inhabitants

Atomic energy's peacetime contributions will far overshadow its war uses, William Brooks, United States Patent Office examiner, told the Oldest Inhabitants, Inc. last night at its meeting in Odd Fellows Hall, 9th and T sts. nw.

Scientists are working just as hard on peacetime applications at Oak Ridge and Los Alamos as they did to develop the atomic bomb during the war, he asserted.

In its business session, the association commended Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio), for his stand in opposing District appropriations as long as segregation is maintained, and commended the Interior Department for opening up a group of tennis courts on a non-segregated basis.

Charles Hanson Towne

Towne had been editor of Harper's Bazaar, Smart Set Magazine, and McClure's Magazine. He also conducted a daily literary column in the old New York American.

In 1940 he went on the stage, playing the role of a clergyman in the play "Life With Father."

Towne, a native of Louisville, Ky., was the author of numerous books, including travel memoirs, novels and commentaries. He also wrote poems, having had five songs published, and collaborated with others in composing several songs. Surviving is a sister and a niece.

Mrs. Dora D. Wolford

Lovettsville, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.). Mrs. Dora D. Wolford, 88, widow of Stiles E. Wolford, died early this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lester Schutte, in Lovettsville, after a long illness. She was a native and life-long resident of Loudoun County.

L. W. Coudray Burial Rites In Cedar Hill

Funeral services were held on February 22 for Laurence William Coudray, 79, retired Interior Department employe who died February 19 at his home, 4705 Dalton rd., Chevy Chase. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Born and educated in Woodstock, Va., Mr. Coudray operated a clothing and department store in Newport, R. I., for 25 years before coming to Washington in 1917, where he became an employe of the Reclamation Bureau of the Interior Department. He retired about eight years ago and had been living with a daughter, Mrs. Marie Bowling.

In addition to Mrs. Bowling, he is survived by a son, Robert C. Coudray, vice consul in Shanghai, now here on leave; a brother, Robert D. Coudray of Wethersfield, Conn., and a grandson, Joseph L. Bowling, jr.

Capt. Welch To Be Buried In Arlington

Capt. George F. Welch, 33, killed in action in Italy February 8, 1945, will be reburied at 2 p. m. Wednesday in Arlington Cemetery.

Capt. Welch

A native of Tuskegee, Ala., Captain Welch was a graduate of Dunbar High School and Howard University here. At Howard, he received degrees in electrical and mechanical engineering.

Following graduation he was employed as assistant engineer in the university power plant. He entered the Army in 1941 and served with the 366th Infantry Regiment.

Captain Welch is survived by his wife, Wendella; a son, George F., jr., and a daughter, Lynda, all of Boston. He also leaves his mother, Mrs. M. R. Welch of Tuskegee; two brothers, Ernest Welch, 1234 Kearney st. ne., and John Welch, 1414 Lamont st. nw., and two sisters, Mrs. Thomas E. Burrell, Neptune, N. J., and Mrs. Edgar D. Wilson, Kings Mountain, N. C.

Sherman Otis Hayes

Boston, Mass., Feb. 28 (AP).—Funeral services will be held Wednesday in Fremont, Ohio, for Sherman Otis Hayes, 60, of New York City, grandson of the late President Rutherford B. Hayes.

Hayes died here yesterday. He attended Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, and was associated with the automobile industry for the past 25 years. He leaves a daughter, Lucy, and three brothers, Webb of Fremont, Ohio; Walter of Toledo, Ohio, and Scott of Los Angeles, Calif.

Leonard Exel Dies at 41 in Naval Hospital

Leonard Exel, jr., 41, a former chief and trustee of the Branchville, Md., Volunteer Fire Department, died Sunday at the Bethesda Naval Hospital after a brief illness.

Mr. Exel

A native of Berwyn, Md., he was the son of Leonard Exel, sr., and Mrs. Katherine Exel of Berwyn and attended schools in Berwyn and Hyattsville.

A mechanic with the Leo Butler Co., a construction firm in Silver Spring, Md., since 1941, Mr. Exel served 13 months in Europe with field artillery components of the Third Army during World War II. When he was discharged from service in 1946, he was a sergeant.

Mr. Exel was a charter member of the Branchville Fire Department when it was incorporated in 1925 and a charter member of the department's rescue squad when it was established in 1939. He served as chief of the department about 1934 and 1935 and as department trustee in 1945 and 1946.

Besides his parents, Mr. Exel is survived by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle F. Exel, with whom he made his home at 8907 49th ave., Branchville; a stepson, Alton E. Bramblett of the Branchville address, and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Kaes of Hollywood, Md.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 1 p. m. at the Chambers funeral home, 5801 Cleveland ave., Riverdale, Md. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Harry Hayne Funeral Rites Listed Today

Funeral services for Harry C. Hayne, 87, a retired Government Printing Office assistant foreman, will be held today at 3 p. m. at the S. H. Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Hayne died Saturday at his home, 1507 Van Buren st. nw., after a long illness.

A native of Wapakoneta, Ohio, he was born on October 10, 1861. As a boy he learned the printer's trade in his home town prior to entering the Government Printing Office here in 1896.

Mr. Hayne was a member of the Columbia Typographical Union 101

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Clara R. Hayne, and a daughter, Mrs. William J. Erskine, both of the Van Buren st. nw. address.

Ex-Employe Held In Hospital Loss

Columbia Hospital's former bookkeeper, formally charged with embezzlement over the reported disappearance of $40,000 in hospital funds, yesterday awaited Federal grand jury action.

The defendant was identified by Municipal Court records as Frank K. Jenkins, of 8341 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Jenkins' case, it was disclosed yesterday, is being presented directly to the grand jury, according to the U. S. Attorney's office here. Bond of $1000 set on the charge in Municipal Court on December 24 is being continued.

Col. N. L. McDiarmid, superintendent at Columbia, said the funds shortage, apparently accumulated over a period of at least three years, was uncovered after the bookkeeper was discharged in December "for other reasons." It was discovered, he said, during audit by a second accountant.

Jury Indicts Two Men on Sex Charges

Pelsie Dockery, 47, of 1221 8th st. nw., was indicted here yesterday on charges of having carnal relations with two sisters, aged 10 and 12 years, on seven occasions.

The District grand jury presented the true bill for carnal knowledge, conviction for which offense carries the death penalty.

In another sex indictment, Leroy J. Brown, 24, of 318 New York ave., was charged with pandering. According to the charge, he started a 19-year-old mother of two infants, one of them of nursing age, into prostitution, arranged dates for her, put her in a brothel and took most of her earnings.

Alfred T. Allard, 30, of Sunnybrook, Md., was charged with subornation of perjury in a disorderly conduct case in Municipal Court. According to the indictment, he induced two women and a man to testify falsely in the case and to say that he was not disorderly. Police said they subsequently learned the witnesses were absent when the disorderly conduct occurred.

George H. Robinson, 46, of 4610 Ridge pl. se., suspended superintendent of the midcity postoffice station, was indicted for allegedly abstracting a letter containing $12 from the mails.

Lions to Present Raincoats to 42 School Patrolmen

Schoolboy patrolmen of three Prince Georges County schools will receive new "official" raincoats today as the gift of the Mount Rainier-Brentwood Lions Club.

Formal presentation of the slickers will be made at 9:30 a. m. at the Mount Rainier Elementary School by Herbert W. Reichelt, attorney and president of the Lions Club.

Patrol captains from the Mount Rainier and Brentwood elementary schools and the St. James Parochial School will be on hand to accept them.

The coats, 42 in all, were purchased by the Lions Club at a cost of $325 as part of its community welfare program.

Court Voids Suit to Halt Flower Sales

A suit to force Arlington Hospital to stop selling posies in its lobby was tossed out of Arlington Circuit Court yesterday.

Judge Walter T. McCartley held the complaint to be "insufficient under law." But he gave the Northern Virginia Florist Association 30 days to file an amended complaint.

The suit had been brought by the florists' association to get the hospital to remove a refrigerated, flower-vending box. The association called it "unfair competition."

Attorney John Paul Jones, representing the florists, noted an exception to the ruling. If he fails to file again within the 30 days the suit is finished.

The flower box is operated by Washington florist W. V. Steddon, who was represented by Alexandria Attorney Stanley King. Attorney Lawrence Douglas appeared for Arlington Hospital.

Jones said he understood the florists' association was meeting tonight to decide whether or not to continue the suit. Association President Paul C. Sprinkel could not be reached for comment.

Two Singers And Violinist Are Heard

By Paul Hume

Two good programs, two good singers and a good violinist were all at work in Washington's smaller halls last night.

The Rybier Music Club brought out Arlene Carmen, mezzo-soprano, and Norman Farrow, baritone, in the Washington Club. Meanwhile Maurice Wilk was fiddling in Phillips Gallery.

Farrow is the most mature of the three, his voice a bass-baritone, rich in timbre, beautifully shaded in dynamics, and backed by solid musicianship. He appeared in the Library of Congress some months ago as a member of the Bach Aria Group, a fact which alone vouches for musicianship. Farrow's phrasing, enunciation and thorough comprehension of songs by Schubert and the intricacies of Pergolesi's Salve Regina, made his work the highlight of the evening.

Miss Carmen owns a real, honest, handsome voice. Its deeper tones are best, though her lighter moments at the top are pleasing enough. But her system of tone production makes sustained high work in full voice rather strident. She shows signs of singing with more than average understanding. The practice of music requiring extreme agility would benefit her in many ways. The entire program at the Washington Club promised much which time refused our hearing.

Within Phillips Gallery's familiar walls, Maurice Wilk was playing a program well designed until the last group. Here, with a toss of the head to American music, Wilk went off into a batch of display pieces worth little.

His traversal of the warm A Major sonata of Faure was lyrical in the right places. But Wilk tends to abuse the privilege of vibrato, and his pitch in the high driven moments went galley west. The scherzo was a bit hectic for these reasons. Work on long sustained lines, clear, steady tone, and absolute accuracy are models Wilk has undoubtedly set himself, for he is ambitious and possesses plenty of talent.

Group Health Called Pioneer For U. S. Plan

The unsolicited indorsement was given by J. Donald Kingsley, Assistant Federal Security Administrator, chief speaker at the voluntary health insurance organization's anniversary dinner, at the Department of the Interior.

"Just as your heads tonight are unbloodied and unbowed," Kingsley declared, "so will our heads be 11 years from now."

AMA Attack Recalled

The speaker recalled that several years before start of Group Health, the Journal of the American Medical Association "labelled such proposals as yours, and I quote, 'socialism and communism, inciting to riot.'

"Now the blows are falling on those who carry the program only one step forward," he declared. "For the program of compulsory health insurance is merely the means of extending to the whole country the program your association has well begun.

"All we propose is to change the method of payment."

Kingsley said the Administration-backed program would fully utilize such voluntary service plans as Group Health, and that they "could serve as a good right arm of the system." Group practice, he stated, will "almost inevitably" be stimulated by compulsory health insurance.

Concerning the 12-point program of the AMA, the speaker said it "and all the other halfway proposals with which we are now being flooded . . . is the poorhouse approach to the solution of social problems."

Kingsley's talk, warmly received by the 500 persons attending the dinner, received the cautious thanks of the association president, William E. Warne, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, in behalf of "an audience deeply interested in the subject."

The association, which boasts 16,200 participants, has taken no official stand on the proposed compulsory health insurance plan, spokesmen emphasized.

At last night's dinner, it was announced that Dr. Harold Eskew, practicing dentist of Charlotte, N. C., and asociate professor at the dental school of the Washington University, St. Louis, has been named director of the association's newest venture for group dental insurance.

His appointment will be effective April 1. In the meantime, the dental clinic which began operation in January, will continue under its acting director, Dr. Irving Lichtman.

'Personality' Is Security Firing Basis

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 28 (AP). A Navy electronics laboratory director said today an employe had been dismissed as "a poor security risk for reasons of personality."

The Daily Journal said in a copyrighted article the dismissed employe declared his loyalty "was never questioned."

Capt. R. Bennett, director of the laboratory, said Brosseau was "given full legal hearings under normal Civil Service Commission procedures" and may appeal.

Brosseau's wife, Eva L. Brosseau, was also removed from a position as clerk-stenographer at the laboratory. She was transferred to the stenographic pool.

Brosseau told the Journal that during the war he was trusted in positions involving top secrecy. He said he worked for the Justice Department, Office of Strategic Services, War Department and State Department. His record was cleared by the FBI, he added.

Envoy Hits UN Policy On Indonesia

THE Netherlands Ambassador, E. N. van Kleffens, said yesterday that his country could not abide by the recent decision of the United Nations Security Council to reinstate the Indonesian Republican government immediately. And he also stated that his country does not recognize the authority of the Security Council to intervene in the Indonesian problem since it does not concern two sovereign states.

In his address before the Netherlands-American foundation at the Sulgrave Club, Ambassador van Kleffens said Holland proposes, in lieu of the U. N. demand, round-table conferences between representatives of its government and of the Indonesian Republic to "hammer out settlement" of the dispute. He said that if the Republican government is reinstated per se "sinister elements" will move in.

Defends Army Move

The Ambassador said there is much misunderstanding about the Netherlands' army's move into the Indonesian Republic last December. He explained that his government offered military resistance to the rebelling Indonesians only because it had learned that an all-out uprising by the "Indonesian bandits" was scheduled for January 1. This would result in total chaos, he said, and inevitable Communist domination.

He pointed out that the problem of Indonesia is not whether or not the Republic gets its freedom and sovereignty. "It will get its sovereignty and freedom, and soon," he stated. "That is a foredrawn conclusion." The question, he said, is whether it will be a freedom with order or disorder.

For 'Common Man'

Holland, he asserted, is fighting for the protection of the "common man" Indonesian. The Republican government is not democratic, he went on, and the majority of the Indonesians are afraid of it.

In conclusion, the Ambassador stated that his government will protect the Indonesians until a democratic government can be formed, but that "the Security Council hampers our efforts to face realities."

Preceding his talk Ambassador van Kleffens presented Clarence A. Aspinwall, president of the Netherlands-American Foundation, with the Orde van Oranje Nassau, degree of officier, in behalf of Queen Juliana. Mr. Aspinwall was cited for his efforts to foster better understanding between the two countries.

Turkish Envoy, Mme. Erkin Entertain at Dinner

THE Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin were hosts at a dinner last evening at the embassy for a company of 18.

The guests included the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Thorpe, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Bretsch; the Turkish First Secretary and Mrs. Melih Esenbel and the First Secretary, Faruk Berkol.

Junior League Group Hears Call For Union of Free Peoples

BOLD ACTION to establish a union of the free world was advocated by Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, in a speech before the Junior League of Washington at a dinner at the Chevy Chase Club last night.

"The real disharmony of the world today," the speaker said, "springs from the fact that, while our scientists have obliterated distance and joined the world together, we still are operating on the political level with a system of national sovereignties as obsolete as the ox cart."

It is impossible to break down nationalistic barriers, he said, "insofar as countries dedicated to the Communist conspiracy are concerned. But we can go forward together with the rest of the free world."

Referring to an editorial printed in The Washington Post which spoke of "a call for a constitutional assembly for the consideration of a grand federal union," he pointed out that it would reach peoples who see their governments building up vested and nationalistic interests which must seem to them defeatist as well as senseless.

Quoting from the editorial further, he said, "Partnership is the effective alliance and the only one."

Stalin's Problems

"Our problems on this side of the Iron Curtain are certainly large, Mr. Graham told the Junior League audience. "But I think we sometimes forget how great are Stalin's problems. And how extensive his weaknesses."

The speaker said a reliable observer with postwar experience in Russia had told him that Russian industry would be incapable of an achievement like Oak Ridge or Hanford for 40 years.

"We cannot become complacent," Mr. Graham warned, "but our problems are real enough without believing the Russians to be the 'inscrutable supermen' we only a few years ago considered another Asiatic aggressor."

Mr. Graham also emphasized that we must not lose sight of the long-run purposes of the Atlantic Pact and of our total foreign policy as difficulties arise. "The specific difficulties are the news of the day; but the slow growth of European security is the history of the decade," he explained.

Pointnig out that the high-water mark of Russian aggression came about a year ago when the Communist coup d'etat took place in Czechoslovakia, and that the situation has been reversing itself since then, Mr. Graham said, "We have done what General Marshall aimed for after the Moscow Conference of 1947, when he said we must seize the initiative and maintain it."

At the Head Table

Mrs. Herbert P. Fales, president of the league, presided at the dinner. Seated at the head table were Mrs. Graham, wife of the speaker; the chairman of arrangements, Mrs. Harrison Brand, 3d; Mrs. Fales, Mrs. Thacher Winslow, chairman of education, who arranged last evening's program, and Mrs. Charley Runyon 3d, director of Region 11 of the Junior Leagues of America.

Three hundred members of the local league and their guests were present at the dinner.

World Needs U. S. System, Sen. Wiley Says

"FUTURE wars could be avoided if other nations had the same system of checks and balances as the United States Government," Senator Alexander Wiley told members of the D. C. Business and Professional Women's Club in a speech at the Mount Pleasant Library last night.

The Wisconsin Senator expressed the belief that World War II could have been averted if the Japanese Diet and the German Reichstag had been run like the United States Congress. For example, he pointed out that if the Diet had possessed the power to check its military clique, there would have been no Pearl Harbor. And if the Reichstag could have curbed Hitler there would have been no war in Europe.

A world parliament with its varied peoples, he said, would need the same type of checks and balances as we have in this country.

"Big business is checked by anti-trust laws," he emphasized. "When labor gets too powerful and unruly it is checked by laws such as the Taft-Hartley Act. The executive and legislative branches of the Government check each other."

Miss Marjorie Webster, head of the BPWC's international relations committee, introduced the speaker, and Miss Genevieve Rogers, club president, presided.

Argentine Naval Group Feted Here

THE dramatic Argentine flag of buff-blue and white stripes centered with a flaming sun was displayed alongside the Stars and Stripes at a party in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday. It was a reception for a group of Argentine naval officers launching their four-day visit in the Capital.

The honor guests are the officers of the Almirante Brown, the Argentine cruiser which is pausing in New York Harbor before completing its training cruise. Rear Admiral Osborne H. Hardison, U. S. N., Director of Pan American Affairs for the Chief of Naval Operations, was official host.

He and his wife received the guests with Capt. Carlos A. Garzoni, commanding officer of the Almirante Brown, and the Argentine Naval Attache, Capt. Oscar J. R. Rumbo, and Senora de Rumbo.

The Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Louis E. Denfeld and Mrs. Denfeld headed the United States Navy group who came to meet the Argentine officers. Others who were invited were Vice Admiral and Mrs. Arthur W. Radford, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Arthur D. Struble, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Arthur C. Miles, Vice Admiral and Mrs. William M. Fechteler, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Robert B. Carney, Vice Admiral and Mrs. John D. Price, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Aubrey W. Fitch.

Mrs. Edwards Honor Guest at de Weldons' Party

MRS. INDIA EDWARDS, director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, was presented with a bust of President Truman last evening at a party given by the sculptor, Felix de Weldon, and Mrs. de Weldon at their apartment on Q st.

The bust is a replica of the bronze one de Weldon did for the President that is now displayed in the Cabinet room of the White House. Mr. Truman was presented with his likeness the day after his inauguration by the Democratic National Committee.

Vice President Alben Barkley was ranking guest at the party. Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Snyder and their daughter, Miss Drucie Snyder, were also there, and so were the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan.

Others who accepted the de Weldons' invitation are Mrs. George Mesta, Mrs. Howard McGrath, Mrs. Clifton B. Cates, Mrs. W. T. Cle-

Mrs. Frederick W. Witt was the guest in whose honor Mrs. India Edwards gave a luncheon yesterday at La Salle du Bost.

Her other guests were Judge Marion Harron, Mrs. George Mesta, Mrs. Betty Tyson, Mrs. Cyrus Ching, Mrs. Claude Pepper and Miss Doris Fleeson. Mrs. Witt plans to leave on March 8 for South Africa where her husband has been assigned by the Treasury Department.

Federation Asks End of D. C. Rent Controls In Year; Backs Local Child Labor Law

By Genevieve Reynolds

THE D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday unanimously indorsed a resolution calling upon Congress to authorize "an orderly withdrawal of rent control in the District within the next 6 to 12 months."

The resolution also asked for allowance of a 15 per cent permissive increase in rentals over the basic 1941 rents, with credit to the tenant for any increase which has been granted since 1947.

At the same morning session held in the Hamilton Hotel, federation members rejected a proposal to sponsor a revision of the child labor law in the District. In a recent tal kat a conference called by the American Committee to Preview Legislation for Children in the Eighty-first Congress, Mrs. Gertrude Folks Zimand, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, said that Congress would be asked to revise the D. C. child labor law. She contended that the 20-year-old District law needs four principal changes: (1) to establish a 16 year minimum age for all employment during school hours; (2) to establish a 16 year minimum age for work in manufacturing and mechanical establishments at any time; (3) to reduce the maximum 48 hour week for minors under 18 years to 40 hours a week; (4) to revise the street trades provisions.

Praises D. C. Law

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, D. C. Federation legislation chairman, reported that the local federation had been asked to sponsor a campaign to bring about the suggested provisions stated above. "But the legislation department at this time does not advise revision," she said. "After prolonged discussion we believe the child labor law here is better than in any State in the Union," she maintained.

She pointed out that to all intents and purposes the District has a 16-year-age minimum with the exception that children of 14 and 15 years of age who have completed the eighth grade may get work permits. "Only 91 children out of a possible school population of 110,000 obtained the work permits," explained Mrs. Wiley.

"Washington is different from most cities. We have practically no manufacturing or mechanical establishments here. The chief occupation is the United States and D. C. governments. There are practically no newsboys. The street corner trade is carried on by middle aged and elderly people."

Mrs. Wiley said that the National Child Labor Committee should consult with Dr. Hobart Corning, superintendent of the District Schools, on its proposed revision of the D. C. child labor standards.

Delegates Named

Mrs. Ernest Howard, Mrs. Robert Bates, Mrs. Gertrude Parks and Mrs. Wiley were elected delegates to the General Federation of Women's Clubs' annual convention, slated for April 24 to 30 in Hollywood, Fla. Alternates named were Mrs. Benjamin Schoenfield, Mrs. Horace K. Fulton, Mrs. Frank J. Mulkern and Mrs. H. A. Madison.

Other business included a vote to withdraw membership from the D. C. Motion Picture Council, and to contribute $5 to the Philippine Boy Scouts.

James T. Gallahorn, head of the Webster Americanization School, told federation members that 1085 students from 79 different nationalities attend the school at 10th and H sts. nw. "I wish we could put wings on the Americanization school and fly to every country in the world to present it as a living example of how people can live together," he said.

Gallahorn told the federation members that he had met over 2000 war brides and feels that the American boys got a better bargain than the girls whom they brought here from foreign countries. "In many instances the foreign war brides are better educated and more cultured than their husbands," he explained.

Mme. Helb Speaks

Mme. Henri Helb, wife of the Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy who was another speaker on the afternoon program," told of the Dutch people's contribution in the development of Indonesia.

Mrs. David Kincheloe and her daughter, Mrs. Jean Kincheloe Wavis, presented a musical program.

Ask Anne

About Refurnishing Cotton Flounces

I have a dressing table skirt made of cotton net flounces. It is now soiled and the cotton net is losing its stiffness. What can I use to restore it? T. A. S.

Wash the skirt as you would a curtain. When clean and thoroughly rinsed, dip it into a heavy starch solution. Follow the directions for making the heavy starch which appears on your starch package. When starched, dry thoroughly, sprinkle and iron.

Will you tell me what requirements as to age and education which a girl must have to join either the WAVES or WACS? E. S.

For entrance into the WACS the applicant must be between 18 and 34, inclusive and must be a high school graduate. WAVES require that entrants be between 20 to 30, inclusive, and also have a high school education.

Is there a paint available that can be used to refinish table pads? The felt side is still in very good condition but the white side has stains which I have been unable to remove. I once heard or read they can be painted. B. D.

So far as I know there is no special paint for this purpose, but this treatment might freshen the pads: Paint the top surface with flat white paint to cover the soil. When it is thoroughly dry, put on a coat of clear spar varnish or a varnish made from phenolic resins which are resistant to heat. Three varnishes are called "heat resistant" and though they will not stand boiling temperatures, they would not be affected by warm dishes.

I have a cast-iron ash tray that has been broken. I do not know how to fix it myself or where to have this ash tray repaired. If possible would you be so kind as to supply me with information on this matter? L. DeP.

Cast iron must be welded to repair a break. For a firm to do the job look under "Welders" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

What are the usual refreshments served at a baby shower? It will be held in the evening and there will be about 10 present. Would "spiked" punch be appropriate? Also, have you any suggestions as to novel decorations, such as for displaying the presents?

Refreshments for an evening shower could consist of a substantial dessert, salted nuts and a hot beverage such as coffee or tea. Wedges of fluffy angel food cake topped with whipped cream into which has been folded diced bananas, peaches, pears, maraschino cherries and pecans would be delicious. Or, a strawberry or peach shortcake using frozen fruit would be nice. Because the guest of honor should avoid alcoholic beverages, "spiked" punch would not be particularly appropriate for this occasion.

The presents could be displayed on a table under an opened umbrella which has been colorfully decorated with frilled crepe paper. Carry out your party color scheme in the umbrella decorations. Or, you could wrap the gifts in white tissue paper and place them in a large basket made to resemble a nest. To further carry out the idea, on the edge of the nest perch a large stork. In the bill of the stork place a card bearing the guest of honor's name.

Inquiries and contributions to the "Ask Anne" column must be in written form. We regret that time does not permit handling them by telephone. Address letters or cards to Anne, Room 403, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

To Be Served at Women's City Club

'Shrove Tuesday' Pancakes Are Bitter-Sweet Combination

By Lucia Brown

"PANCAKE Day, Pancake Day," sing the children of England. "Give us a holiday or we'll run away!"

Here in Washington, Shrove Tuesday may not be a holiday but but you'll find pancakes aplenty if you drop in at the Women's City Club between 11 a. m. and 6 p. m. today. In line with a centuries-old tradition of the English-speaking world, pancakes with sugar and lemon—and even a bit of tea or coffee—will be served all day long.

Mrs. James W. Boyer, a past master at Shrove Tuesday pancake making, will be in charge of the sizzling griddles. A native of London, charming Mrs. Boyer has baked pancakes on eight different Shrove Tuesdays for the benefit of various worthy causes in Washington. Here is the way she makes them:

PANCAKES
1 cup flour
2 eggs
1 pint milk
Pinch salt

Put flour in mixing bowl. Make hollow in center of flour and break eggs into it. Gradually beat eggs in with a fork. Add a little milk gradually until you have a smooth batter. Add remainder of the milk and last of all the pinch of salt.

Starts Night Before

Mrs. Boyer always makes the cakes at least the night before. She believes keeping them overnight in a cool place—or even for a day or two—makes the finished cakes more tender and light.

When ready to cook them she uses a pan that's hot but not smoking. Two tablespoons of the thin batter will cover the bottom of an ordinary frying pan. When the edges curl she turns the cakes lightly and browns them on the other side. Turned out on a large plate, they are sprinkled with granulated sugar and lemon juice, then rolled up. More sugar gives them a frosty topping and a slice of lemon is served along with them.

"According to the tradition, lemon is for the bitterness of sin, sugar for the sweetness of forgiveness when you're 'shriven' of your sins on Shrove Tuesday," says Mrs. Boyer.

For Many Causes

Mrs. Winston Churchill is among the famous guests who have eaten Mrs. Boyer's pancakes on other Shrove Tuesdays. She has baked them for the benefit of the Royal Air Forces Benevolent Fund, British War Relief and the United Nations War Relief.

Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador, has accepted an invitation to today's feast at the club at 1733 I st. nw. The public is invited to attend the affair, which is for the benefit of the club's civic and welfare fund.

Finders Keepers

Best of the "keepers" in the apple kingdom are the crisp, shining red Winesaps which may be found now at your favorite fruit market. Grown in the famous Washington State orchards, the Winesaps are tender and juicy, with a spicy flavor that's tops for eating and salads. Good in pies, cakes and puddings, too.

This New Coffee Flavor Makes Early Morning Angels

It turns Bears into Dears... it's a wonderful, wonderful spirit-lifting success

A steaming, fragrant cup of this heavenly new Chase & Sanborn Coffee will bring out the "angel" in any man! "What's in it?" people ask!

The answer is Selecciones (pronounced seleck-see-o-nays). That's the Spanish for selected... some coffees selected mainly for perfecting body... others selected mainly for perfecting flavor. Yes, the flavor coffees in this mouth-watering new blend are hand-selected 1,—2,—three times!

1. Hand-selected from shade-grown, pedigreed trees.
2. Hand-selected at the peak of ripeness.
3. Hand-selected before and after curing.

No wonder it's so delicious. Try it! If you don't think it's the best coffee you ever tasted, just send us the unused portion and we'll give you double your money back. Get your pound today! (It's vacuum-packed, of course.) And long live your houseful of early morning angels!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, Past 40, Married, With Many Worries, Finds Mother's Habitual Complaints the Last Straw Nowadays, and Mother Turns Ire on Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My parents have never been compatible. From childhood on the lives of my sisters, brother and myself have never been free of their frequent, often violent quarreling. We are all married now or living apart from them, but mother continues in a habit of complaining against father, either vocally or in writing.

In the past I have endured this as well as I could, realizing the truth of much she said; and, truly sympathetic as I was, trying to see compassionately that the behavior of both was largely due to their unfavorable childhood histories.

Now, however, I am past 40, married, with other personal problems, too, as well as suffering for some years with nervous ailments and a cardiac condition; and I find it increasingly difficult to listen quietly to the continual rehash of old grievances, with new ones added.

Weariness Warps Daughter's Mind

IN FACT, on several occasions recently I have become very upset and in the resultant bickering I found mother's animus concentrated on me; and I am charged with lack of sympathy, unwillingness to commiserate with others in their troubles, etc.

I don't believe I am really unfeeling, and the issue isn't whether my mother's complaints are justified, for I do agree she may have grounds; but the question is—What behavior is best in these circumstances? I am so exhausted, mentally and physically, that I cannot think reasonably any more about this.

Just what is the role of the truly good, sympathetic daughter in relation to a mother who sees herself as the most unfortunate of unhappy persons? I need a guide to right conduct more than you can imagine; and I shall be deeply grateful for your wise counsel, or a reprimand if such is indicated. R. P.

Daughter's Now in Father's Spot

DEAR R. P.: Isn't it significant that your mother concentrates her "animus" on you, when it dawns on her that you've lost patience with her eternal nagging demands for commiseration?

At long last, you find yourself in your father's shoes in relation to her. What she expects of you, she expected of him, to start; and when he got fed up, their discord began to flare in frequent, often violent quarrels.

Your mother is an infantile neurotic character, wholly self-concerned, who doesn't love expansively, hence cannot keep love in her life, and so she tries to feather her nest with pity.

After a while, all victims of that type of "drive" get sick of it, and when they do, the pity-seeker hates them, calls them cruel, unfeeling, etc.,—which is the story of your mother's habitual persecution of intimates. And yet she considers herself the martyred figure.

Mother's Like Fretful Baby

THE NEUROTIC nature of her torrential complaining is disclosed by her practice of continually rehashing old grievances to add to new ones. In short, she is always building a case "against," —instead of counting blessings, making allowances and seeing some good in the situation, relationship or person that irks her: as normally balanced, self-respecting, loving-kind individuals do in this far-from-perfect world.

In essence she is angry with life, because it has painful aspects; and she acknowledges no responsibility to bear up cheerfully. Rather, she holds others fully accountable for how she feels; and when things don't go to suit, she rages like a wrathful infant in wet diapers.

In my opinion, a fundamentally loyal compassionate daughter may justifiably deal curtly with her complaints, when and if they become the "last straw" in an overload of damaging pressures. The truth is, the sympathies of discerning people flow freely and respectfully to gallant souls who don't court pity when making their way over stony ground. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Intriguing Flavor

Spicy Washington Winesap apples, cucumbers and celery make a refreshing salad combination with delicious flavor. Marinate separately in French dressing 2 cups unpeeled red apples cut into match-sticks, ½ cup chopped celery and ½ cup chopped cucumber. Moisten for ½ hour. Drain. Add mayonnaise to moisten. Serve on a bed of lettuce and garnish with watercress.

Piano Practice a Persisting Problem

"I don't know what to do. She won't practice and I don't see why we should pay for lessons if she doesn't take advantage of them. I wonder whether I shouldn't be more strict. I'm afraid she'll say later, 'Mother, why didn't you make me practice?'"

Does this sound familiar to you? Over and over again, parents worry aloud about the youngster's failure to keep up with as much piano practising as he is supposed to. Boys seem more resistant, but boys and girls alike frequently feel that other things are much more important than sitting at the keyboard going over music exercises.

What should parents do? It may very well be that children will later chide them for not having been more firm. On the other hand, many a youngster who, in adult life might have enjoyed music, has been permanently turned against it because of forced practice.

Insofar as possible, practice should be made pleasant. It should not be scheduled at times when all the youngsters in the neighborhood are out playing. Interest on the part of parents in progress helps. Flexibility in length of practice times is another aid. But there is no easy answer. If, in spite of efforts to make practice acceptable, the youngster still hates it, it's probably better to "lay off" for a time. Later, perhaps, interest will develop anew.

Rep. Woodhouse Backs North Atlantic Pact

The North Atlantic Pact is an extension of the Monroe Doctrine, according to Representative Chase Going Woodhouse.

The Connecticut Congresswoman, who believes the pact must be a strong and unequivocal one since a weak pact would be useless, was the guest speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday.

The last two world wars were caused by aggressors who thought the United States would stand on the sidelines, she said. The North Atlantic Pact, Mrs. Woodhouse explained, would focus the strength of the "forces of good," so that the "forces of evil" would be overcome before they assert themselves.

Discussing the European Recovery Program, Representative Woodhouse stated that one reason the Soviet has termed it an "aggressive program" is because the ERP is so successful.

In Germany, Representative Woodhouse said, the United States has a choice, either to pay the bills or rehabilitate the country. In Mrs. Woodhouse's opinion, Gen. Lucius Clay is to be commended for his work of educating the German people in democracy. The textbooks have been rewritten to emphasize democratic views, she said, and in government the Germans are made to realize that the German officials are "servants of the people."

The American in Germany, she said, has taken the form of a combination school teacher, social worker and industrial engineer. On her recent trip to Europe she attended one of the "town meetings" in Germany and found them "like the OPA meetings at home."

Mississippi to Exhibit Products at Benefit Fashion Show Today

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, director of international relations of FSA, says her two Mississippi State tables may spring a surprise at the fashion show and luncheon which the Woman's National Democratic Club is sponsoring today at the Mayflower Hotel.

Her native State has sent a display of its mineral, agricultural and industrial products for the State and Territory table contest, which will be a feature of the benefit. Mrs. Woodward hopes her State will walk off with one of the prizes to be awarded by a committee of judges. Members of the committee are Greta Kempton, portrait painter; Harry Lewis Raul, curator of the museum of the Department of the Interior, and Thomas M. Beggs, director of the National Collection of Fine Arts of the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Truman, guest of honor, will be received at the luncheon by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, club president, and Mrs. Lorton Sims, chairman of the benefit.

Celler Would Lease Belasco Theater

Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) yesterday introduced a House bill to convert the Belasco Theater on Lafayette pl. nw. to use as a legitimate theater.

His bill calls for the Government, which owns the building, to pay expenses of converting it for theatrical productions and ballets, and then to lease it for not more than five years.

Dormitory Fire Deaths Set at Nine

Gambier, Ohio, Feb. 28 (AP).—Death toll in the Kenyon College dormitory fire climbed today to nine.

Jack McDonald, 18, of Hamilton, Ohio, died of a skull fracture, and President Gordon K. Chalmers officially abandoned hope for six students missing since flames destroyed the dormitory Sunday morning. Two other deaths were recorded earlier.

HARDLY A HICK: Patricia Hall used to be a model, but Universal has signed her up for one of those rustic comedies of Marjorie Main and Percy Kilbride, "Ma and Pa Kettle," inspired by their success in "The Egg and I"

One on the Aisle—

Frances Starr 'Album' Heroine

By Richard L. Coe

NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT in New York's Ziegfeld Theater, some of the great performers of our day will be facing a unique challenge.

They'll be recreating some of their celebrated roles at a star-studded benefit for ANTA. Conjuring up the past is always a tricky business, for one's theatrical memories are like nothing else, so many imponderables enter the picture.

Washington's Frances Starr will be one of the heroines of the evening. For in this second of the annual "ANTA Albums," Miss Starr will be recreating her part of what was "A Streetcar Named Desire" of its day. Last year's Album included Helen Hayes in a scene from "Victoria Regina" and Katharine Cornell in one from "St. Joan," but those reached back only a few years.

Miss Starr's Laura Murdock in Eugene Walters' "The Easiest Way" made her bow under the David Belasco banner in 1909. Because she's lived so many varied lives as actress, housewife and socialite, and because the one thing Miss Starr detests talking about is her particularly rosy past, she has the looks, slim figure and vitality to recreate the closing scene of this noted American drama.

For the closing scene of "The Easiest Way" was a sensation when Miss Starr was just edging out of her teens. She played the part of a struggling actress who'd been unfaithful to her honest fiance from the West and had accepted the attentions of a rich man who kept her in luxury. In the final scene both have disowned her, the first unhappy ending of a popular American play. Without "The Easiest Way's" trailblazing, Henry Fonda could not have died in "Mister Roberts," Lee Cobb could not have been a suicide in "Death of a Salesman." Unless, of course, they'd played for only a week's run.

That Famous Line

And as the curtain goes down, Laura Murdock sees that she's alone. She orders her maid to "doll me up." "You going out, Miss Laura?" "Yes," Laura answers, 'Im going to Rector's to make a hit and to hell with the rest."

This line has echoed down the years of American theater and Miss Starr has been amused to hear how other people imagine she said it. It was a big scene in Kaufman and Hart's "The Fabulous Invalid," but, according to Frances, it was all wrong.

So next Sunday night, with the help of Louis Calhern and Anthony Ross, Miss Starr will pick up the perspective, so to speak. She'll show an audience, that's paying from $3.60 to $100 a seat, just how she captured the Nation with that famous curtain line.

Unique Star Parade

A more recent scene will come from Tallulah Bankhead, who'll be doing one from "The Little Foxes," with Carl Benton Reid in his original role. Robert Morley has persuaded Producer Gilbert Miller to return to the acting he gave up decades ago to play a waiter to his own memorable "Oscar Wilde." Walter Hampton will revive that "Cyrano de Bergerac," which, to many in our land, is the only Cyrano they've ever seen.

Another great moment will come when Norma Terris, wearing the same costumes on the same stage, sings "Only Make Believe" from "Show Boat." Gracie Fields will sing "The Biggest Aspidastra in the World." Mae West will do "Frankie and Johnny." Mitzi Green will let loose on "The Lady Is a Tramp."

Dancing will hold its own on a well-rounded program arranged by Producer John Houseman. Jerome Robbins, John Kriza and Harold Lang will get together again for that frivolous ballet, "Fancy Free." Ray Bolger will do his famous "Old Soft Shoe." The Hartmans will revive "A Return to Dancing." And Avan Long will do "Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones."

Another Washingtonian

Picking these performers and their material has been the work of the New York theater critics, and getting the stars to risk playgoers' memories hasn't been easy. The Sun's Ward Morehouse had the happy idea of bribing Miss Starr by taking her to the opening of "Death of a Salesman," which found Frances leaving her Kalorama rd. apartment in a happy tizzy.

Another Washingtonian with the Album is Larry Baker, son of the 15th st. lawyer and Mrs. Lawrence Baker. Larry's been dancing in the theater more years than his youthful looks suggest, and now he's on the managerial side. Sunday night he'll be one of the Ziegfeld's assistant stage managers, paying particular heed to the Hartmans, with whom he worked at Easthampton's summer theater. Larry's also assistant casting director for ANTA's "Talent Showcase," that parade of understudy and buried talent scheduled for April 12 in Gotham.

As to whether you can still get tickets to Sunday night's super benefit, I don't know. I practiced what I preached after publishing a paragraph some weeks ago detailing how to get seats, so mine arrived in the mail yesterday. You might still get them through Warren Munsell, 141 West 44th st., or at the Ziegfeld, but that's just a slim chance. The money goes to pay the running expenses of the nonprofit American National Theater and Academy.

Reformatory Riot Quelled With Tear Gas

Granite, Okla., Feb. 28 (U.P.)—More than 300 prisoners rioted at Granite State Reformatory today and six guards and several convicts were injured before the uprising was quelled with tear gas.

Two prisoners suffered bullet wounds but neither was in serious condition.

The rioting broke out shortly after noon in the main dining hall, while 350 prisoners and 12 guards were in the room.

The guards reported the prisoners attacked them with crudely made knives, clubs and other improvised weapons, and then attempted to barricade themselves in the hall. Other guards were able to carry the wounded prison employes from the room, holding the convicts at bay after shooting two of them in the arms.

The prisoners barricaded themselves in the building and called Warden Claude Moore's office on the telephone.

"They started to make demands," Moore said, "but about the only thing I heard distinctly was that they wanted to see the Governor about something. I don't know what they were mad about. They always have some excuse for making trouble."

Moore gave them 15 minutes to file out of the hall one at a time, hands in the air.

"After the 15 minutes were up, we started lobbing tear gas shells in there," he said. "I guess we fired 25 or 30 rounds before they started coming out."

Goodwill Officers Are Reelected

James C. Dulin, jr., retired Washington banker and attorney of Rockville, has been reelected president of the Davis Memorial Goodwill Industries.

The organization, formerly known as Goodwill Industries, was renamed at the meeting in honor of its benefactress, the late Mrs. Anne Hubbard Davis.

Also reelected were Mrs. Karl Fenning, vice president; Mrs. Beulah J. Drake, secretary; W. Perry Early, treasurer, and Paul J. Seltzer, assistant treasurer.

Lewis Illness Denied

The United Mine Workers yesterday denied reports that UMW Chief John L. Lewis is ill.

Union Council Votes to Back CIO Policy

The Washington Industrial Union Council, CIO, voted last night to adhere to CIO policy on all legislative and policy matters, following a stormy meeting in which new officers, representing anti-Communist CIO locals, took over control of the Council.

Dillard Stokes, member at large of the Washington Newspaper Guild, was elected president of the group, which is composed of 15 locals affiliated with nine CIO international unions. Stokes received 23 votes; there were none for his opponent, Milton Kelenson, of Local 3 of the United Public Workers.

The new vice presidents elected are: Philip Price, Guild; T. J. McCarthy, Oil Workers; Edgar T. Cook, Laundry Workers; Morton Lifton, Government Workers; and J. P. Covington, Transport Service Employes. The non executive secretary is James C. Gildea, of the Office and Professional Workers.

The election was preceded by a series of parliamentary snarls over the seating of newly elected delegates. In the past two months, nine CIO locals representing approximately 3500 members, have voted to affiliate with the Council, with the avowed purpose of wresting control from the alleged left-wing groups which have controlled it for the past 12 years in spite of several efforts to unseat them.

Kelenson presided until the last of the new delegates was seated, and then announced he could not participate further in the meeting. He left the room, followed by 10 of his supporters, and the election of new officers followed.

Other officers elected last night were: Miriam Ottenberg, Guild, recording secretary; William Pryor, Guild, Mrs. Elsie Chapman, Laundry Workers, and Charles Finlayson, Transport Service, trustees; Thomas Moran, Office Workers, treasurer, and H. E. Shanton, Oil Workers, Sergeant-at-arms.

Silver Spring Group Approves Of Referendum

The Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring, Md., last night approved a State referendum in 1950 on calling a constitutional convention.

The group also, during a meeting in the Silver Spring Liquor Control Board Building, called for repeal of the Maryland Act requiring potential voters to declare party affiliations and intent to become citizens of Maryland a year in advance of voting.

Referred to the legislative committee was a bill calling for a $1,500,000 bond issue to construct a Silver Spring Hospital recently presented to the Montgomery County Council for action during its legislative session in May.

THE YEAR'S MOST HONORED MOVIE

TWO YEARS AGO Washington audiences were privileged to see a film which has since taken its place among the great works of the screen. The picture was "Open City" directed by Roberto Rossellini.
We are proud to present the director's latest masterpiece, the Year's Most Honored Movie . . .

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

Thank you, Friend

When things go wrong and life takes on . . . A disapointing trend . . . I do not sigh or weep but I . . . Remember you, my friend . . . I keep my courage and my faith . . . Because I know that you . . . Have shown me how the grayest sky . . . Can turn to one of blue . . . Your smile has illustrated that . . . This world is not in vain . . . And confidence is all I need . . . To keep away the rain . . . I contemplate the kindly words . . . That you have said to me . . . And then I feel as though my heart . . . Has reached the rainbow's end . . . And all the gratitude in me . . . Belongs to you, my friend.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Better Late Than Never, Says Jack Swan

Jack Swan, Arlington auto dealer, is just back from a business trip to Norfolk, and reports that he mixed a good bit of pleasure with his business.

Jack managed to wangle a big hug and a kiss from an 18-year-old Norfolk gal whom he hadn't seen since she was 2 months old.

She's Margaret Swan—Jack's daughter.

UPSTAIRS AND DOWN

The other day we printed a complaint from Betty Topley about an Irwin cartoon which showed an infant with two teeth—"one upstairs and one downstairs."

The complaint was that "the first two teeth to appear are both lowers. Two uppers break through later."

Mrs. E. R. Murphy of Arlington Farms doesn't agree, and points out that her son, Bill, cut an upper tooth first, then a lower one.

"That reverses the usual procedure," she admits, "but tell Irwin it is possible."

Anne Flynn of Purcellville, Va., goes Mrs. Murphy one better. Her Carole cut two upper teeth first.

And Mrs. Charles W. Pickens of 3109 Lancer pl., Hyattsville, Md., clinches the matter. She, too, admits that most children get two lower incisors first; but when her Judy was an infant, she looked just like Irwin's drawing—one up and one down.

"As a matter of fact," she adds, "after that we never knew where to look for the new teeth; they came in all over the place. She cut one of her molars before all her front teeth were in."

Take that smug look off your face, Irwin, and come on out of the doghouse.

AMBASSADORS (CONT.)

Helen Lindsley of Piney Point, Md., adds another story about hackers to our collection.

The Lindsleys were visiting in Washington last weekend, and looking for Volta pl. They pulled up alongside a cab at a traffic light, and asked directions.

The hacker explained the route, and the two cars parted. But a few blocks later, the Lindsleys were overtaken by the same hacker, and motioned to the curb.

"I wasn't sure about those directions I gave you," explained the cab driver, "so I checked with our radio dispatcher. I gave you a bum steer—here are the proper directions."

And then he proceeded to give the visitors the correct route to Volta pl. Says District Liner Lindsley:

"There may be other kinds, but we think that Washington cab drivers are wonderful. It's a pleasure to visit your city."

See what I mean about good—and bad—will ambassadors?

STREET(CAR) SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Michael L. Moore of 3460 New Mexico ave. nw.

It was on the N-2 bus, at about 9:25 a. m. A small old lady had boarded the bus, and asked in broken English about the fare.

Rapidly and impatiently the driver replied: "Thirteencents-lady."

The old woman didn't catch it, and had to ask again. Even more impatiently, the operator barked: "Thirteencentslady. One nickel'n fie pennies."

She put one nickel and five pennies in the box, and the driver let it pass. Then she asked where she might transfer to an L-4 bus, and the answer came back:

"Yaketchitat ayeteenen um."

The look of despair on the old woman's face was too much for the passengers to bear any longer, so we went to her rescue. It turned out that she was from Persia, and didn't know very much about Washington.

It was a rotten morning for all of us, to know that she had been greeted by an "ambassador" like that driver. We were embarrassed for our city, and for Capital Transit.

See what I mean about good—and bad—will ambassadors?

WHY DON'T THEY?

Why don't they use different colored backgrounds on streetcar and bus destination signs? Nearsighted patrons could identify the colors long before the lettering becomes legible to them. (Suggested by James Ames of 221 Mississippi ave. se.).

PIED TYPE DEPT.

"The fine was imposed by Pudge Neilson after the defendant pleaded builty."

Paul Muse of the Manassas Messenger adds another bright line, from another story:

"Going abroad shortly afterward, he lied in Italy for a time."

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Short spring, wasn't it?

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—The eight former presidents of the Screen Writers Guild, who have been asked to nominate the five best-written movies for the Guild awards, can't agree . . . Cleveland Amory, author of "The Proper Bostonians," is writing his first novel . . . An advertising agency sent a man to Hollywood, in behalf of a sponsor, to get the movie-makers to do a one-hour television show a week, for 52 weeks. "We're willing to pay $25,000 a show," the agency man told a producer, who remained unimpressed and replied: "Lassie's stand-in gets more than that" . . . Frank Glazer, the pianist, who spent five years in the Army, will start his concert tour of America with a Carnegie Hall recital March 4. He once was a piano-builder and professional tuner.

Some of the local movie houses last week offered revivals of "Balalaika," the musical which starred Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey. George Oppenheimer wrote the screenplay, a story about the Russian revolution. The past portion of the screenplay was so well integrated that the disturbance of any part of it would make it useless . . . The producer and director called him in and, despite his protests, ordered that he insert a scene in which Nelson Eddy would sing a solo. Oppenheimer, who was anxious to be relieved of any further work on this movie, proposed this insert: A scene of the rebels, emerging from the cellars carrying weapons and marching on the palace, chanting, "We want Prince Kulagi." The prince, played by Eddy, hears the rebels' chant, misunderstands them, and comes out on the balcony and sings his solo.

Mrs. Goodman Ace showed her husband a bank-book in which she had deposited money he never knew she had saved. "I saved this money," she said, "by going to the Paramount, and getting there each time just before the price-change."

As an April Fool gag, the back cover of Pageant's April issue is the same as its front cover, but upside down.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Truman Balks at Praising Draper

By Drew Pearson

President Truman staged a brief personal sitdown strike the other day against his aides' habits of writing flowery letters to resigning members of the Administration. Even when resignations have been forced, White House secretaries have written fulsome letters of praise to be signed by Truman.

Pearson

But when Undersecretary of the Army William Draper resigned the other day, Truman looked at the letter praising him and refused to sign.

In the end he demanded that the letter be rewritten.

Inside fact is that the President had informed several Senators that he had no objection to their staging a full-dress probe of Draper and his conduct of the American military government in Germany—if a preliminary investigation by the old Ferguson Committee seemed to warrant it.

Draper's Wall Street firm, Dillon, Read & Co., in which Secretary Forrestal was also a partner, had extremely close ties with Germany before the war and poured millions into the German cartels which later munitioned Hitler's army. Since the war both Draper and Forrestal have been under fire for permitting German cartels to be built up again in such a way that history might repeat.

Latest revelation about Undersecretary of the Army Draper is that in 1940 when he was in a colonel's uniform in Washington his business partner in Berlin was Alexander Kreuter, an officer in Hitler's Elite Guard. At that time Colonel Draper and Kreuter put across a large real estate deal in Berlin, in which Draper had a 14 per cent interest. After the war, Draper brought SS Officer Kreuter into the American military government.

Chavez Assist

Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico probably doesn't realize it but indirectly he helped Gen. Harry Vaughan's friend, Dictator Peron, get rid of his high-handed economic dictator Miguel Miranda, author of various decrees against American trade.

What happened was that when Senator Chavez was in Argentina, a luncheon in his honor was arranged by United States Ambassador James Bruce. Miranda was the chief Argentine guest and proceeded to spout off in blunt language against Peron.

And after the lunch was over, astute Ambassador Bruce took pains to see that Peron heard about it.

Although Peron was boiling mad, he still didn't quite have the courage to fire his economic czar. Simultaneously, however, Miranda made another faux pas.

Blonde Lady's Ire

He had set up a system whereby the Argentine wool producers came into his office and ponied up 3 per cent of the value of their crop. He gave them no receipt, and they were never sure what happened to their cash.

When they protested, Miranda informed one of the wool men he could give no receipt because the cash went to Evita—famous blonde movie-actress wife of the dictator.

One of the wool men promptly took this back to Senora Peron and she hit the ceiling. Not only did Evita demand that Miranda be fired, but she told Peron that she would go off to Biarritz if Miranda remained in office another day.

Even then Peron delayed firing Miranda. Next day when he went home for lunch the gorgeous Evita was missing. Temporarily, she had walked out.

After lunch therefore Peron called in his army leaders, suggested that they officially ask him to fire Miranda. With this excuse to back him up, Peron finally called in his economic czar and told him the army demanded his scalp.

Acheson's Ire

Secretary of State Dean Acheson is a placid, soft-spoken gentleman. But beneath his red mustache, lurks plenty of temper when provoked, and last week he let it loose on Minnesota's Walter Judd in a closed-door session on China policy.

The fireworks started when Acheson declared that United States policy of keeping China "free and independent" hadn't changed since John Hay instituted the "Open Door" policy in the McKinley Administration.

"Then why have you cut off aid to China?" sharply demanded Judd, a former China missionary.

"As a matter of fact, our Chinese policy is not the same. It changed when President Truman sent your predecessor George Marshall over there after the war to establish what the Administration called 'peace and unity.'

"That meant coalition with the Communists and history shows that when Communists move in, independence goes out the window. They demonstrated that by increasing their holdings in China five times by the end of 1946, while we were withholding arms and supplies from Chiang Kai-shek."

Acheson, still cool, retorted that much of the aid Judd spoke of wasn't used to fight communism, but went into the pockets of Chiang Kai-shek's lieutenants.

"Corruption in China," fired Judd, "is petty pilfering compared with what we did at Yalta, where we handed over control of Manchuria to the Russians after China had fought off the Japs for 14 years.

This time Acheson really let the former China missionary have it.

"Your concept of what happened at Yalta," he snapped, "and what is happening in China today is so utterly different from mine that it is useless to continue arguing about it. You and I have had this out before, Congressman. I'm not going to change your mind, and you're certainly not going to change mine."
